

Morse Urges Abolition of Smith-Connally Enactment

Washington, June 21 (U.P.)—Sen. Wayne C. Morse (R., Ore.) urged at a war labor board hearing Wednesday that labor and management "join forces to abolish the Smith-Connally anti-strike law at the earliest possible date." Morse said he had so advised the Los Angeles Metal Trades Council (AFL), which has taken a vote to strike if the WLB denies its demand for 11.6 percent wage increase for ship repair workers. The higher wage for repair work now prevails in San Francisco, Portland and Seattle areas.

"The Smith-Connally act is so unsound and inimical to the best interests of labor and industry that I think the representatives of labor and management should join forces to abolish it at the earliest possible date," Morse said.

He said he objects to the use or threat of economic force while a case is pending before the WLB. But the "legal right" a discrimination that cannot be justified," Morse said. "We highly disapprove of the position the procurement agencies have taken."

"We are concerned about the post-war reconversion of the great west coast ports to a sound economy because we believe a sound economy for them will mean a sound economy for the nation. We are greatly concerned about the elimination of discriminatory practices which result in economic discriminations against the ports."

Morse Spokesman

Acting as spokesman for all of the Pacific coast senate delegation, Morse said he was not pleading a labor case but one of public interest. A former WLB public member, Morse said that it was the first time he had appeared before the board in the role of pleader. Rep. Richard J. Welch (R., Cal.) also urged the WLB to grant the 11.6 percent wage increase in southern California. He spoke for the west coast delegation in the house of representatives.

"I urge you to remove an injustice that never should have been permitted to exist and which has tended to retard repairs on battleships and merchant vessels so necessary in our war effort," Welch said.
