Hartley said the men overseas are almost unanimous in their feeling that:

"1. Having fought in a war they did not want their sons to have to fight in a war.

"2. Having seen what war does to cities and civilians, they wanted to keep war away from our country."

"I believe these men, if they had a chance to study and understand this charter, would be, as I am, wholeheartedly in favor of its acceptance by the senate," he said.
