Capital Business College Purchased by F. W. Breakey

Capital Business college, located at 345 Court street, and believed without dispute to be the oldest school of the kind on the Pacific coast, has changed hands, effective September 1. Mrs. Robert Hutcheon, the former owner, has sold the school to Forrest W. Breakey, who comes to Salem from Port Angeles, Wash., where he has been superintendent of schools for the last 11 years.

Mrs. Hutcheon came to Salem from Montana as a reporter for the Statesman. Twenty years ago she became a teacher at Capital Business college which was then owned by the late W. I. Staley. Five years ago she became one of the owners with O. D. Adams and June Gaines, and later bought their interests in the school.

Mr. Breakey has been in educational work for 25 years. He served in the navy in World War I, and is a member of the American Legion, the Kiwanis club, and the Masonic lodge, and was a member of the Chamber of Commerce at Port Angeles where he also was district governor of the Kiwanis.

Mr. and Mrs. Breakey have bought residence property on Belmont street. They have a son and daughter, Donald, who is in the navy, and Betty Ann, who is in junior high school. Mrs. Breakey is a sister of Mrs. Henry V. Compton of Salem.

Capital Business college was founded by a man named Armstrong. A year later he sold it to W. I. Staley who operated the school over 50 years. Some notable persons have passed through the school as students, among them Herbert Hoover.

The greater Boston community fund organization came to Bryan's aid with an offer to pay hospital expenses and a Camp Edwards army doctor, who asked to be unidentified, said he would treat Diana.

When the child's condition improves, she will return home and rejoin her younger sisters, Patricia, 19 months, and Jeri, eight months.

Bryan, a native of Vancouver, Wash., offered Diana for adoption Friday after he was unable to place her in a state institution or a private hospital within his means.

Milk Distributors Freed from Order 79

Oregon milk distributors are released from the limitations of order 79 which placed a quota upon the amount of butterfat allowable in milk available for the fluid trade, the federal production and marketing administration Monday wired Director of Agriculture E. L. Peterson.

The wire, signed by William C. Weiden, said quotas were suspended August 20 by Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson but that record keeping and reporting provisions of order 79 are still in effect. The quota suspension order is announced as effective as of August 1.

Suit Filed Against Tax Return Act

The state tax commission today brought suit in supreme court to declare invalid the 1945 law providing for simplified state income tax returns.

The commission contended the act signed by the governor is not the same as that passed by the legislature, since a legislative committee added matter not approved by either house.

Distribution Class to Start

Classes in "distributive education" will be included in the program of the Salem public schools beginning this fall and all plans have been completed for the project, Superintendent Frank B. Bennett announces. The course is similar in purpose to courses sponsored under the Smith-Hughes act and is designed to give young folk an opportunity to get a few fundamentals in clerking or similar lines of endeavor. It is outside the scope of the apprenticeship department which leads to a journeyman.

The course in distributive education is expected to be particularly appropriate in view of legislation passed by the state early this year which changes the compulsory school attendance law from eight to 12 grades. Pupils taking advantage of the course will for the most part be those who have positions in stores, restaurants or similar institutions and who will have sufficient time off from their employment to meet with their instructors for at least an hour a day. They will be taught personal care, hygiene, the proper display of merchandise, salesmanship and information necessary in dealing with the public.

In the meanwhile the teacher will check with the pupils' employers in an effort to get the most out of the course. Approximately 40 pupils have signified their intention of taking part in the work. This will mean two classes daily.

Frank Thomas, 5, of Turner got a cut in his heel Sunday afternoon that necessitated his being taken to Salem General hospital where, first aid said, eight to 10 stitches would be necessary. The injury resulted when he got his foot caught in the spokes of a bicycle at Cloverdale school. First aid was given Monday to Mrs. Carl Volving, 163 Gerth, who got her right hand in a clothes wringer, and to Mrs. Ray Smith, 2350 West No Hill, whose right hand was injured in the motor of a refrigerator that she was trying to oil.

Police report the following automobile collisions, all Saturday afternoon or evening: Elwood Olsen, a navy man, driving a car registered to Jack Everson, and a car driven by Martin F. C. Herron, 2390 South Church, at High and Trade.

The front of a house in the 1100 block on North Front street was destroyed by fire Saturday evening just after 8 o'clock. Firemen said the occupants of the house were away. Another Saturday evening alarm came from the Grand theater, where a cigarette thrown into a street grating caused a small fire in the basement.

Chief of Police Frank A. Minto said Monday he wanted to express the thanks of the police department to soldiers and military police who assisted the city police in traffic control at the paper mill fire Sunday evening.

Other parachute rescue team reported the liberation of Lt. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, hero commander of Bataan and Corregidor, from a prison camp north of Mukden, Manchuria.

At last reports, the paratroopers were en route south to Mukden with Wainwright and it was anticipated that he would be flown to Chungking within the next few days. Moscow announced the red army's capture of Mukden early today.

What Is Wrong When Prayer Fails? Thirty years ago, in Forbidden Tibet, behind the highest mountains in the world, a young Englishman named Edwin J. Dingle found the answer to this question. A great mystic opened his eyes. A great change came over him. He realized the strange Power that Knowledge gives.

That Power, he says, can transform the life of anyone. Questions, whatever they are, can be answered. The problems of health, death, poverty and wrong, can be solved.

In his own case, he was brought back to splendid health. He acquired wealth, too, as well as world-wide professional recognition. Thirty years ago, he was sick as a man could be and live. Once his coffin was bought. Years of almost continuous tropical fevers, broken bones, near blindness, privation and danger had made a human wreck of him, physically and mentally.

He was about to be sent back to England to die, when a strange message came—"They are waiting for you in Tibet." He wants to tell the whole world what he learned there, under the guidance of the greatest mystic he ever encountered during his twenty-one years in the Far East. He wants everyone to experience the greater health and the Power, which there came to him.

Within ten years, he was able to retire to this country with a fortune. He had been honored by fellowships in the World's leading geographical societies, for his work as a geographer. And today, 30 years later, he is still so athletic, capable of so much work, so young in appearance, it is hard to believe he has lived so long.

As a first step in their progress toward the Power that Knowledge gives, Mr. Dingle wants to send to readers of this paper a 9000-word treatise. He says the time has come for it to be released to the Western World, and offers to send it, free of cost or obligation, to sincere readers of this notice. For your free copy, address The Institute of Mentalphysics, 213 South Hobart Blvd., Dept. S-619, Los Angeles 4, Calif. Readers are urged to write promptly, as only a limited number of the free books have been printed.—Advertisement.

Only 55 Combat Vessels Remain of Japan's Navy

Guam, Aug. 21 (AP)—Only 55 combat vessels, including six German submarines, remain of Japan's once formidable fleet of 382 fighting ships, it was announced today by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz headquarters on the basis of official reports confirmed by Japanese surrender envoys.

Rear Adm. Forrest C. Sherman, deputy chief of staff for Nimitz and Cincpac plan officer, said that Japanese officials at the Manila conference with Gen. Douglas MacArthur had confirmed the "complete destruction" of the enemy's navy and the reduction of her once formidable merchant fleet to a relative handful of ships.

The Japanese naval envoy at Manila, Sherman said, asserted that the nearly complete chocking off of the island empire's sea lanes had brought an acute shortage of food, transportation and gasoline.

Here is what Nimitz' headquarters said is left of the Japanese navy, once the third largest in the world:

One crewless battleship—the Nagato—afloat but heavily damaged at Yokosuka of an original total of 12 capital ships.

Two aircraft carriers Hayataka and Katsuragi of a one-time total of nine. Both are without crews and lying heavily damaged at Sasebo and Kure, respectively.

Two gutted hulls out of what was once eight light carriers.

No trace of an original five escort carriers or of 24 light cruisers.

Only two of 19 heavy cruisers, both heavily damaged and without crews, in Singapore harbor.

Twenty-six destroyers, four of which were heavily damaged, of an original total of 165. Of 140 submarines only 22 remain, including six German U-boats, apparently turned over to the Japanese before the end of the European war and possibly used as cargo carriers to the Japanese held bypassed Pacific islands.

The Japanese also revealed that they were unable to cope with mines laid by Superforts and the American navy because of a shortage of minesweepers.

MacArthur's post-conference statement yesterday made it plain that the negotiations developed no concessions beyond the original one of preservation of the throne.

The Japanese, in a second message on the subject to MacArthur, urgently sought discontinuance of parachuting aid to prisoners of war and internee camps in the Japanese area by small American groups.

The Japanese said they had accepted the offers of the Swiss government and of the Red Cross to represent the allied governments; that the special parties were "unnecessary" and it was impossible to guarantee the safety of such groups.

Return of both the white-painted Japanese surrender planes was delayed by minor mishaps but Chief emissary T. Gen. Takashiro Kawabe reached Tokyo at 8:30 a.m. (Japanese time) 7:30 p.m. Monday, Eastern War Time) with the instructions MacArthur's aides had handed him in two days of strenuous conferences at Manila.

Tokyo meanwhile professed to the world that she was extremely fearful many of her military men—"without any experience of actual defeat on the battle"—would create disorders the moment MacArthur and his hosts landed in Japan.
