

Stock Killers Being Sought

Scio—Recent depredations on sheep and goat flocks in the Lacombe area led to a search for a black bear that had left large tracks in the neighborhood. The hunters gave brain a merry chase but were unable to get a shot at it.

Those from Scio taking part in the quest included Jack and Oral Bates and Leslie Thayer. The Bates took a number of trained trail hounds, which, while they frequently overtook the bear were unable to tree the animal.

In years past several bears have been crowded by Bates' hounds and killed by hunters after the predatory animals had taken refuge in trees.

Fall of the year finds bears stalking among livestock and poultry in Scio foothills and many have been killed in this area.

Orchards and beehives are particularly attractive to bears, and fresh lamb and poultry likewise are relished by them.

Later hunts are contemplated by men of the community in the hope of saving livestock from attacks by predatory wild animals.
