

Congressmen from Many States Pay Tribute to J.W. Mott

Nine members of the house of representatives in Washington from various states in addition to the Oregon and Montana delegations paid tribute to their late colleague, James W. Mott, at the afternoon session of the assembly on Tuesday, November 13, according to the Congressional Record. Brief excerpts are:

Martin, (Mass.) — "He was a man of strong convictions and with courage to fight for those convictions. His fine mind and keen intellect helped materially to build the mighty American navy of today. He personified the high type of public servant required to successfully combat difficult problems in our path."

Vinson, (Ga.) — "He was more than a close colleague to me—he was my partner in what was once a most unpopular crusade, the fight for a strong and powerful navy. We always knew that his penetrating mind would detect any flaws in our proposals. He demanded facts and logic. The void created by his untimely passing will long pervade the meetings of the Naval Affairs committee."

Cole, (N.Y.) — His attitude

a militant, dynamic republican—with an affable personality, unlimited energy, well educated and endowed with native ability."

Grant (Indiana) — "We knew him as an outstanding lawyer, a steadfast American, standing firm for the principles in which he believed."

White (Idaho) — Jim Mott did yeoman service to his own state of Oregon and to the entire country. He was a good parliamentarian."

Thomason, (Texas) — "He was an agreeable companion and a man of fine integrity and ideals. He loved his country and his family with a rare devotion. We traveled together in Europe visiting prison camps."

Whittington, (Miss.) — "We served for many years as members of the committee on roads. He was among the leading spokesmen for highway construction in the United States. He served with me on the committee on flood control for some time. He was courageous and aggressive in the advocacy of the programs and policies for which he stood."

Izac, (Calif) — "I deem it one of my most fortunate experiences to have had Jim Mott as the ranking minority member of the subcommittee on congested areas. We traveled together in our investigations in Germany of prison atrocities and his persevering and searching cross examination of witnesses made him one of the most valuable and sound investigators of this house has produced."

Michener, (Mich.) — "He was

Snell to Hear Dennis' Plea

Andrew W. Dennis, 45, Portland mother-in-law slayer who had been scheduled to die last Friday, was returned to Portland Tuesday after the state supreme court found that no death warrant for his execution had been prepared by the circuit court.

Circuit Judge Martin W. Hawkins will have to prepare a new death warrant, so that Dennis' execution will be delayed at least 30 days. During that time, Dennis will make appeals for commutation to Governor Earl Snell, and possibly take further court action.

The opposing attorneys, defense attorney Edwin D. Hicks, Portland, and Assistant Attorney General Fred A. Miller, agreed that no death warrant existed, and that Dennis should go back to Portland for resentencing and a death warrant.

Dennis sat expressionless through the half-hour hearing. Acting Gov. Howard C. Belton has denied the appeal for commutation of the sentence to life imprisonment. Governor Snell will return to the state next Friday.

Limitations Statute Held Unconstitutional

The state supreme court today handed down a decision branding the state statutes of limitations as unconstitutional.

In an appeal of J. P. Fullerton versus W. E. Lamm and the Deschutes Lumber company, the high court reversed a decision by Lane county circuit Judge G. F. Skipworth and ruled the statute of limitations as an "attempt on the part of the state legislature to control and limit substantive rights granted by an act of congress (fair labor standards act of 1938) and clearly is unconstitutional as such."

Fullerton, as plaintiff, was seeking $6,115 back pay for overtime. The defendant had contended that any employee with claim must bring it within six months as is provided in the statute of limitations.

The opinion was written by Justice Hall Lusk with Chief Justice Harry Belt the only one of the seven justices dissenting.

Polk Association To Forestry Board

The state forestry board announced today that on December 1 it would take over the assets of the Polk county fire patrol association, including the responsibility for fire protection in the area.

The board said that the association, which had to fight the expensive Black Rock fire last summer, felt it no longer was financially able to continue.

The area protected by the association will become a state fire protection district, the fifth to be organized in the state. The others are the northwest Oregon, which the state took over this fall after the Tillamook blaze; the southwest Oregon, the northwest Oregon, and the central Oregon districts.

Ottawa, Ontario, is the seat of Federal government of Canada.
