Power Project Is Under Way

Stayton—A new 1200-volt power line is now under construction from Bates corner in Linn county, to the North Santiam area, officials of the Mountain States Power company, Stayton, announce.

The new line will relieve the heavy load which at present is supplied by the power line from Marion, it is stated. The West Stayton area will receive increased capacity and improvement in service in some areas, due to the construction of this new 12,000-volt line through a new step-down sub-station which was completed recently. It has taken several months to secure the necessary materials for the construction of this new line. Transformers and wire, the utility employees explain are two of the most critical items to secure at present.

The new 66,000-volt sub-station in Scio is being completed as rapidly as the necessary equipment becomes available. Constant back ordering of materials has delayed construction for several months. A new 20,000-volt transmission line from Scio to Stayton will be built as soon as materials are delivered. All preliminary work has been completed for several weeks. Original plans called for the completion of this line by June 1, but due to shortage of necessary materials for construction, it has been impossible to meet the original schedule.

A large service improvement program has been set up for some time and is being completed as rapidly as available materials permit.

Sub Station Planned

Unionvale—Purchase of a 90 by 100 feet in size piece of land has been made by the Portland General Electric from Mrs. J. L. Martin in the Unionvale district. It was purchased for erection of a substation. Immediate possession was given.

Unionsville—Purchase of a 90 by 100 feet in size piece of land has been made by the Portland General Electric from Mrs. J. L. Martin in the Unionsville district. It was purchased for erection of a substation. Immediate possession was given.

Dallas—The month of May lived up to its reputation of being the fair month in this vicinity, with only .98 inch of rain, according to Cecil Riggs, weather observer. This amount was about half the average precipitation for May. The average is 1.77.

In spite of the dry month, the year of 1946 is still ahead of the average, since the first four months each recorded better than average rainfall. The total to date is about six inches over the average for the first five months.
