World of Music

Attention turns to the strictly modern this week for several of the newest records available are worthy of note—at least for those readers interested in such golden-haireds as Perry Como and dulcet-voiced Dinah Shore. Since the war's end and the release of records—minus Petrillo's gentle hand, sales of all types of waxes has jumped and jumped and jumped. Demand still long outdistances supply, but dealers have hopes of filling orders in not too long a time.

Perry Como, the young man with the plush-lined tonsils who has plugged "Prisoner of Love" into the top-selling recording class in recent weeks, is out to do it again with another old favorite.

Como's rich crooning voice is heard in the new Victor recording of "If You Were the Only Girl" and it bids fair again to have a revival of its former popularity.

Como's recent recording of "Prisoner of Love" for Victor has reached amazing sales and the young man apparently is determined to resurrect another old one, dust it off in his golden tones and make it pay off in gold again.

Capitol Records has served up a delightful album of old favorites in "Piano Cocktails," featuring Buddy Cole in his piano arrangements. Cole is accompanied by a guitar and bass, but it is his piano that makes for a frothy collection of dancing and dreaming pleasure.

Included among the numbers are "Night and Day," "Begin the Beguine," "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "Body and Soul," "The Song Is You," "Temptation," "Stardust," and "I've Got You Under My Skin." Cole is the young man who was with Alvino Rey's orchestra for several years before striking out on his own.

Frank Sinatra, the idol of the bobby-soxers, continues to pour out the recordings and in each succeeding recording he seems to grow more accomplished and more pleasing. His latest recording for Columbia is "The Girl That I Marry," in which he is accompanied superbly, of course, by Axel Stordahl.

In other recent Columbia records Harry James and his orchestra do "Who's Sorry Now" and "I Didn't Mean a Word I Said," and Dinah Shore sings "I Got Lost in His Arms" and "Doin' What Comes Natur'lly."

One of the better recordings by Miss Shore, however, is "All That Glitters Is Not Gold," a Columbia recording in typical Shore style.

Ella Mae Morse teams up with Freddie Slack and his orchestra to do "Hey Mr. Postman" and "The House of Blue Lights" in a Capitol recording that comes in slickly.

In another Capitol recording, the popular Andy Russell sings the new favorite, "Laughing on the Outside" and "They Say It's Wonderful." Another recent Capitol recording is "Painted Rhythm" and "Four Months, Three Weeks, Two Days, One Hour Blues"—both done by Stan Kenton and his orchestra.
