

Oregon Gets Page Post Ad

The Oregon highway commission's $120,000 newspaper and magazine advertising campaign to attract tourists to Oregon in 1947 will begin next week with publication of a full-color page in the Saturday Evening Post, the commission announced today.

The campaign will run until next May 1, and is the largest in the history of the commission.

There will be similar advertisements in Colliers, Time, Holiday, National Geographic and other national magazines, while smaller ads will be run in secondary magazines.

In the first ad, there will be a large picture of the Columbia river gorge, and smaller color pictures of the Columbia river highway, Bonneville dam, Wallowa mountains, Mt. Hood and Lost lake.

The commission said the newspaper campaign will be announced later.

The commission's travel information department has a large supply of folders and maps to answer the thousands of requests expected to result from the campaign.

The commission has received 60,000 requests this year, although the advertising campaign was limited. The new campaign will be financed by gasoline taxes paid by tourists, the commission said.

Heavysset Man Sought As Slayer Suspect

Eugene, Ore., Sept. 21 (AP)—State police today were looking for a heavysset man of 50 or 55 years of age in the quest for the killer of Mrs. Cora M. Rogers, 55, who was found slain in her store near Triangle lake early Sunday.

State Police Officer Ralph McGinnis said that remains of food had been found in bushes across from the Rogers store and that neighbors had seen such a man lurking there Saturday.

Mrs. Rogers' body was found with a wire twisted around the neck and with a skull fracture. Lane County Coroner Phil Bartholomew said that death resulted from the blow on the head and not from strangulation.

OPA Claims Relations with Restaurants Cooperative

Every effort has been made and is being made to give restaurants the same consideration as other industries under pricing standards established in conformity with the price control act, Price Administrator Paul A. Porter declared in a teletype release to the Oregon district OPA office Friday.

Mr. Porter made the statement as the OPA was in process of reviewing its September 16 action, restoring June 30 ceiling on restaurant meals and individual items having meat as the major ingredient. The action is being reviewed from a policy standpoint because of the widespread protests from the industry.

"The impression has arisen," remarked Mr. Porter, "that restaurants are being dealt with harshly because of the OPA's failure to permit a continuation of the higher prices for meat offerings which were put into effect during the period when livestock and meats were decontrolled at other levels of sale."

"Actually, although meat prices at retail were brought back under control on September 10, restaurants were given an additional week to continue at the prices prevailing during the meat decontrol period. We thus went out of our way to give restaurants a break."

"When we were considering what restaurant ceiling prices should be on meat offerings, I should be on the price decontrol board ordered meat back under controls, we asked the restaurants in plenty of time, through the national industry advisory committee, to give us a reasonable amount of earnings data to show whether or not they could absorb such higher costs for meat as might result after re-control."

"We offered the help of our staff in preparing the necessary questions to be asked of a small but representative segment of the industry. However, this offer was not accepted, nor was adequate data provided to enable us to make a decision in favor of higher ceiling prices for meat offerings. We will continue to work with the industry to get adequate information on which to back action."

"We are also working on a revision of the restaurant regulation, so as to provide uniform price increase factors for the whole industry on meals or individual dishes containing the major ingredient any commodity that is decontrolled at other levels of sale. Such commodities would include fish, poultry, and dairy products."

Wage Stabilization Board Continues

Washington, Sept. 21 (AP)—President Truman in a statement today said the wage stabilization board "will continue to administer the wage stabilization program."

Reports were current in Washington earlier this week that there was a possibility that a new wage stabilization set-up might be in the making as a result of a presidential request for a study of the whole wage stabilization program by the advisory board of the office of war mobilization and reconversion.

Lawyer Talks On Gun-Toting

La Grande, Ore., Sept. 21 (AP)—At a banquet concluding a week's police training course at Eastern Oregon College last night, 20 law enforcement officers from all parts of Oregon were presented with diplomas and at the same time were informed their studies will fit them to become a "second Scotland Yard of the world."

Principal speaker of the evening was James T. Donald of Baker, president of the Oregon Bar association, and presiding was Howard L. Bobbitt, special agent in charge of the FBI at Portland.

Calling the police arm an "arm of the executive branch of the government," Attorney Donald declared that such training as the officers had received in the past week would place them on a par with Scotland Yard constables. He noted that peace is brought about in London by officers "who do not tote a big gun and a badge like an automobile headlight." And predicted that American law enforcement officers of the future would follow a similar pattern.

"When the law enforcement officer will, by sheer training and self conduct, come to the realization that brawn and barking guns are not his best weapons, then will the lawless give their respect. It will not be necessary to wave guns, but merely a finger of knowledge which will command obedience of our laws."

Officers obtaining diplomas last night were:

Clare Newman, Oregon City; William Ellis, West Linn; W. R. Greisinger, Fred L. Painter and Dale E. Gibson, Bend; Anthony B. Nelms, John W. Paxton, R. N. Adkins and James M. Brown, Klamath Falls; Joseph C. Douthitt and Earl K. Palmer, The Dalles; Gene G. Gaertner, Hood River; O. F. Beyer and F. William Tivey, Astoria; John E. Winburn, Bob Curries, George L. Webb and A. C. Myer, La Grande, and W. A. Silver and Arthur E. Campbell, Pendleton.

Surplus Retail Store Will Open

Salem Surplus Store, a retail store, will open Monday at 976 South Commercial street. The new store will handle only army and navy surplus goods and will sell in lots of one item or more.

Proprietors of the store are E. M. Arkney and D. J. Metz, both former captains in the air corps, piloting B-24s.

"Getting back and getting into business is mighty important to us," said Arkney, "but it is not nearly so important as finding a place to live."

Restaurants to Ignore OPA

Portland, Ore., Sept. 21 (AP)—Oregon restaurant operators last night attended a mass meeting here and voted to ignore the OPA-price reduction.

Some 250 restaurateurs from as far away as Medford condemned the dictum as "an abuse of power by a government agency" and as "an attempt at profit control and cost absorption instead of price control."

The group turned aside suggestions of closure and cutting meat dishes from menu offerings.

Urges CCC Camps For Use of Youths

Governor Earl Snell suggested today that former civilian conservation corps camps in the mountains be used as boys' camps to rehabilitate juvenile delinquents.

"Admittance would be more or less selective with a goal of readjustment and correction before the boy reaches the training school or is sentenced to the penitentiary," the governor said in a prepared statement.

He said the plan is being examined and "compiled for subsequent presentation."

Need for the camps, he said, is emphasized by the story of the life of Kenneth William Bailey, who was executed a week ago for slaying a state policeman. Bailey wrote the story of his life for the state prison magazine, blaming his criminal career on the way he was brought up as a youth.

Henri Becquerel discovered radioactivity in 1896.

Danger Seen in Townsend Tax

Gearhart, Ore., Sept. 21 (AP)—The proposed Townsend 3 percent gross receipts tax would bring economic starvation to Oregon, F. H. Young of Portland told the Oregon Association of Real Estate Boards in convention here Friday.

Young, manager of Oregon Business and Tax Research Inc., said that property values would suddenly be deflated and the export of Oregon farm and factory products stopped by the pyramiding effect of the Townsend tax.

Any new levy incomes, in addition to all other present state taxes, he said, would lessen the quality of homes available to GIs and would advertise Oregon as an ungrateful state.

Young said that Oregon stands sixth in the nation in aid to needy aged.

Harry E. Warren of Portland urged that the state make sales people of the 600,000 tourists who visit Oregon annually. This, he said, would bring the state a boom similar to the one that followed the 1905 Lewis and Clark exposition.
