Dam Hearing Is Open One

Albany—Views pro and con regarding proposed construction of a flood control dam on the South Santiam river will be aired and invited at a public hearing to be held at the Crowfoot Grange hall three miles east of Lebanon and approximately half a mile south of U. S. highway No. 20, it was announced Saturday by the war department.

The hearing, scheduled at 10 a.m., November 9, is the outgrowth of a decision by U. S. army engineers that the originally proposed Sweet Home reservoir is no longer feasible because of Sweet Home's prodigious growth since 1938. This was when the original South Santiam flood control project was mapped, the department announcement explained. Accordingly, it was stated, alternative sites are being considered and it is to give local interests opportunity to make known their desires and objections to the several sites now under consideration.

While oral reports will be admitted, interests planning appearances had better prepare written reports, it is suggested, for the sake of accuracy. These reports may be submitted prior to the meeting to O. E. Walsh, colonel, corps of engineers, district engineers, 628 Pittock block, Portland 5.

Taxpayers Give Poor Addresses

Albany—Tax statements are being mailed from the sheriff's office to about 30,000 Linn county property holders, listing the 1946-47, taxes and even before the last of the statements had been sent out more than 150 have been returned to the office for lack of acceptable addresses, Mrs. Harry Nelson, deputy sheriff in charge of tax collections, said Saturday.

Mrs. Nelson explained that, while in the past the address of a property owner was regarded by the post office as adequate if the post office alone was designated, it is required now that street addresses or route numbers be given.

Inasmuch as the sheriff's office can rely upon its records, many statements that would previously have been delivered are now being returned for better addresses. Consequently, Mrs. Nelson suggested that persons who fail to receive their statements should call at the office or write in, giving the taxpayer's full address, that his statement may be forwarded.
