Dallas Assured Phone Building

Dallas—A new telephone building and a dial phone system for Dallas—a project of about $100,000—is planned by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company, according to R. V. Collins, district manager. Actual construction of the building and the new system is expected to start in 1947 and a lot for the building has been purchased from Victor Williams almost directly across the street from the present telephone office location.

The construction is subject to civilian production administration approval. The building is to be a 40'x70' reinforced concrete structure and will provide space for the company offices in addition to the new dial equipment. Initial plans call for the installation of the dial central office equipment costing in the neighborhood of $50,000, sufficient to serve approximately 1200 new telephones, according to Mr. Collins.

Eventually, he said, additional facilities will be added to serve a maximum of 1800 telephones.

The lot purchased has a frontage of 100 feet and is 150 feet deep.

"When we get the green light to proceed with construction and as rapidly as equipment becomes available, we intend to do everything possible to speed completion of the project to meet the challenge of the increasing demand for telephone service," the manager said.

He pointed out that since 1940 the number of telephones in Dallas had increased from 983 to about 1300. As of November 1 there were approximately 100 Dallas families waiting for telephone service. The new office is to be designed to accommodate expected additional growth.
