Mrs. Harry E. Kresal
ROUTE 1, BOX 19C, HILLSBORO, OREGON
Pays one-half as much for electricity since moving to PGE area
The Kresals and their two children, age 5 and 13, came to Oregon from Minneapolis 2 1/2 years ago. In Hillsboro, they purchased a modern home with a half acre of ground. Mr. Kresal likes Oregon for its mild climate because he drives a dairy truck and works outside all year 'round. But Mrs. Kresal's delight is the saving she realizes in electricity, enabling her to have many electric servants to help with the housework. "Over the last 10 months my electric bill has averaged only $5.79 a month." In Minneapolis she would have paid $10.67, nearly twice as much, for the same use of electricity.
Everywhere PGE Lines Go, It's Economical to Live Electrically
● More than half of Oregon's people live in the Lower Willamette Valley region served by PGE. And every home—in town or out—can easily afford to go "all-electric" because PGE delivers electricity at the lowest region-wide rate in the nation.
Among the 150,000 homes and farms served by PGE, average use of electricity is 2 1/2 times the national average, average cost per kilowatt-hour less than half the national average. The farmer enjoys the same low electric rate as the city dweller. PGE offers to each an equal opportunity for time-saving, economical and comfortable electrical living.
Plan now to go "all-electric." If you cook and heat water electrically, you can save money by applying for PGE's "All-Electric Home" rate. No other distributor delivers electricity so low in cost, to so many homes and farms, over so wide an area.
