

Currant Fly Control Urged

A protective cover of lead arsenate to control the yellow currant fly should be maintained on currant and gooseberry plantings from now until harvest, according to D. L. Rasmussen, assistant county agent.

Recommended for control is a poisoned bait spray containing 2 ounces of arsenate of lead, 1 quart cheap molasses, and water to make 3 gallons of spray. If leaf spot fungus disease is a problem, 2-3 pounds of lead arsenate can be added to an 8-8-100 Bordeaux spray.

The bait spray should be applied at weekly intervals until harvest. Since this spray "weathers" easily, it should be repeated after each rain. The lead arsenate—Bordeaux spray doesn't weather so badly, but several sprays will be necessary to maintain adequate cover during the next few weeks. The sprays should be thoroughly applied on both sides of the foliage.

Coffee in the "green" stage has practically none of the coffee flavor or aroma.

Idaho's Rainbow Trout will get a rousing reception this week at the little city of Sandpoint on U. S. 95 in the northern part of the state. This year, as in the past, the red hatted citizens of Sandpoint will celebrate the opening of the Kootenay Rainbow Trout season with a week-long festival of special events.

Trout, a dainty fish and a mighty riser, will be in the limelight all over the West about this time of year. Ike Waltons, from every walk of life, will soon be wetting Royal Coachmans, Picket Pins, Buddy Mites and countless other varieties of wet and dry flies in streams all over the Northwest.

The flash of the rainbow trout is perhaps one of the greatest of fishing thrills, but other fish are equally popular and plentiful in this region. Bass, perch, chub, catfish, and many other finny favorites rise to bait in the fresh water streams of this fisherman's paradise.

Salmon fishing is another leading outdoor sport during the spring and summer months. Salmon derbies are held in a number of Puget Sound cities each year, and of course the big event of each is Derby Day.

The angler can find plenty of interest in Idaho, Washington, and Oregon. Stream waders, lake fishermen, or salt water enthusiasts will find plenty of sport in the waters of the Northwest.

When you pack up the car for that first fishing trip, we'd like to suggest a full tank of the new Richfield higher octane gasoline. The extra power in this great new motor fuel will make your trip a greater pleasure.
