Hill Resigns Legislative Job

State Rep. Earl Hill, Cushman, Lane county, is resigning today from the state legislature in order that he may continue to serve on the state fish commission. Governor Earl Snell announced this afternoon.

Hill's action follows Tuesday's supreme court decision holding that no legislator may hold an administrative position. The effect of the court's decision is to remove Hill from the fish commission, but to permit him to hold his legislative seat.

Governor Snell said that Hill, with whom he had lunch today, had decided to resign from the legislature today, and the governor said he would reappoint Hill to the fish commission "as of today."

A 1947 legislative act will prohibit Hill's legislative seat from being filled until the November, 1948 general election, unless a special session should be held before then. In the latter event, the Lane county court would appoint a successor.

If Hill wants to serve in the 1949 legislature, he could run at the next election. If elected then he would have to quit the fish commission in order to serve in the legislature.

Hill is one of the veteran members of the house, having been active in taxation and highway matters. He was one of the fathers of the 1947 sales tax bill, which will be submitted to the voters at the October 7 special election. He also is directing the campaign in behalf of the measure.

Governor Snell was believed to have urged Hill to remain on the fish commission, because the governor told reporters that Hill "has performed valuable services on the commission and I'd hate to lose the services of such an outstanding man."
