Dallas Boosts Price of Gas

Dallas—Price of gasoline in Dallas rose to a new high as the new year opened. Dealers of the city met and agreed on a price schedule for all services. Included was a one cent per gallon boost on the price of gasoline besides the recent raises announced by the oil companies.

The one cent additional is to go to the local dealers. As one service station operator put it, "It is the first raise that we have received for 19 years." The group indicated that while the price of gasoline had grown considerably higher, the dealers had not received any benefit locally until the action of the group this week.

Prices in Dallas now are 26 1/2 cents for regular grades and 28 1/2 cents for ethyl. A few raises on lubrication services, washing jobs, and other services were also authorized.

The local dealers and service station operators are not organized as an association but met together for the specific purpose of adopting a uniform schedule of prices. Ray Kliever and Henry Friesen led the meeting.

The one-cent per gallon increase in their favor on gasoline was in conformity with a statewide movement, they declared.
