

1954 Date Set For McNary Dam

Portland, Ore., Jan. 13 (AP)—Army engineers said today that the proposed $30,000,000 appropriation for McNary dam would advance work there greatly, but that completion of the dam could not be expected before 1954.

The engineers said the money would be spent for "construction of additional housing facilities, model studies, field investigations, machinery and bulkheads for navigation locks, complete navigation lock contract now under way, purchase of turbines and generators (initial contract, fish facilities, construction of right and left abutments to dam, additional cofferdam work in preparation for second step of cofferdam construction."

A $14,000,000 outlay was proposed for the Willamette valley flood control project. Engineers said completion of dams in this project still was far off. The Dorena dam, they said, might be completed by 1954. They had no estimates on Meridian and Detroit dams.

Work on these dams was listed by engineers in this way:

"Dorena dam ($3,500,000)—continuation of construction on main earth fill dam and concrete spillway, completion of utility relocation and completion of land acquisition.

"Meridian dam ($7,000,000)—continuation of Southern Pacific railroad relocation contract, highway relocation, access roads, land acquisition, initial construction of dam, fish facilities.

"Detroit dam ($3,500,000)—continuation of highway relocation work under supervision of U. S. Public Roads administration, construction of resident engineer's office building and other structures, fish facilities, land acquisition."

Other appropriations in the McNary dam would advance work there greatly, but that completion of the dam could not be expected before 1954.

Stayton Properties Change Ownerships

Stayton — Recent real estate changes in Stayton reveal sale of property on West Ida street belonging to Charles Lampman and occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ed Sullens and family, to Vince Pietrok.

Mr. and Mrs. Sullens have purchased a home which is now in process of building in the Pines addition. Frank Carter was the owner-builder.

Sale of another piece of property belonging to Lampman on East Ida street to the Ralph Showers was also reported. The Showers have been living east of Stayton.

Ceramics, Oils Now Showing

Ceramics and oil painting make up the exhibition that began Tuesday at the Elfstrom Art Galleries. The famous collection of Rockwood Pottery, pieces that have won international awards since 1887, have been taken from their glass cases at Rockwood's hilltop home and sent on a tour throughout the country.

This is the first showing of this collection in Oregon which Larry Boulter, director of the galleries scheduled over six months ago only to be confronted by many delays. Value of the exhibition exceeds $10,000 because several of the vases are valued as high as $2000 each.

Decorators of Rockwood originals comprise both men and women, and are drawn mainly from the Art Academy of Cincinnati. The pottery is managed on lines opposite to the prevailing factory system. Art by hand is fostered in a spirit of freedom and liberality in order to cultivate in every way individual artistic feeling among the workers employed. Clays used for all purposes are entirely American and largely from the Ohio valley.

Pieces on exhibit include the famous "Tiger Eye," developed in 1884. This is the first of the class known as crystalline glazes since so extensively developed elsewhere. Other glazes are: vellum mat, ombroso mat, ox-blood and soft porcelain.

CUTICURA SOAP, TALCUM OINTMENT

In conjunction with the Rockwood exhibit, oil landscapes by Percy Manser, Hood River, are featured. Manser had a successful exhibit of his small oils last summer in the local galleries and now presents the large paintings that have endeared him to the hearts of Hood River art lovers for the past 25 years.
