Mr. and Mrs. Lester Henn

ROUTE 2, BOX 16, WOODBURN, OREGON
say—"We depend on electricity in our business as well as our home".

The Lester Henns, owners of an ultra-modern chicken hatchery in Woodburn, rely doubly on the benefits of electricity. "It's my biggest helpmate in promoting the healthy growth of little chicks," says Mr. Henn. "Electricity makes possible my electric incubator, brooder, running hot water, lights, and a spotlessly clean hatchery." As many as 30,000 chicks are hatched during the heavy brooding season.

Mrs. Henn points to electricity in their home as just as important to its successful running. "The appliances in my all-electric home help me make it a more attractive place to live, and to get household tasks done with time to spare for leisure," she says. "Electricity makes both our work and off-work hours more enjoyable."

Mr. and Mrs. Henn use these Appliances on their All-Electric Farm

The PGE "All-Electric Home" rate is available anywhere in this area

No housewife ever thinks of going back to grandma's way of doing household tasks once she's tried the modern electric way. But if our modern housewife were to keep house for just one day without the help of a single electric appliance—no washing machine, radio, refrigerator, range, etc.—she'd be sure to emerge from that hard, all-day task with an even greater delight with today's electric appliances.

Every appliance telescopes countless hours of time and work saved—hours which can be turned to leisure and enjoyment of home, family and friends. And each additional electric help increases convenience as well as the hours saved.

Every home in the PGE area can enjoy the benefits of "electrical living." If your home is not yet "all-electric," make it so by installing an electric water heater and range. Then apply for PGE's "All-Electric Home" rate at the nearest PGE office.

Flying Grandmother Pleased With Oregon

Lincoln—Avalt Miller of Lincoln is a grandson of one of the flying grandmothers, Mrs. Pauline Wendt. Mrs. Wendt was 83 on Christmas day. She is in good health, and seems to find it a continual surprise that her eight great grandchildren are so healthy, as compared with the children of Germany.

Interested in all that she sees in America Mrs. Wendt has so far escaped the sickness so many have had when they come here from the war stricken countries and become ill from eating rich food.

The meat markets and grocery stores with their abundance of provisions are a source of interest to this grandmother who is so happy to be here. Mr. and Mrs. Avalt Miller are the parents of three of Mrs. Wendt's great grandchildren, Marvin, Norma and Verna.
