Polk Granges Wait Awards

Dallas—The annual Polk county agricultural conference for Grange agricultural committees is to be held at the Rickreall Grange hall, Friday, February 6, starting at 10:30 o'clock.

This conference, states W. C. Leth, Polk county agent, is held mainly for two purposes. One is to decide which Grange agricultural committee has conducted the best agricultural program during the past year and to award the Dallas Chamber of Commerce plaque to the winning Grange. The other purpose is to plan next year's program and set up rules for the contest again.

For many years the Grange agricultural committees, with the assistance of the county agent's office and representatives from Oregon State college have set up a program listing a number of major problems, three of which are to be selected by a Grange for major activity during the coming year. In addition to these major projects, scoring also provides credit for regularity of reports by agricultural committee members at Grange meetings, and the holding of a tour, community demonstration, or having an agricultural exhibit at Pomona Grange.
