14 Nazis Sent To Gallows

Landsberg, Germany, Nov. 26 (UP)—Fourteen convicted German war criminals were hanged by the U.S. army today at Landsberg prison.

Emil Pleissner, keeper of the "rose garden," where inmates of Buchenwald concentration camp were slowly starved to death, was among those hanged.

Storm Trooper Pleissner was charged with feeding cabbage poisoned with strychnine to 35 prisoners in the last stages of starvation.

The executions brought to 229 the number of Germans who have paid for their cruelties in the stone prison here.

Herd Association Calls Annual Session

The Marion County Dairy Herd Improvement association's annual meeting has been set for Wednesday, December 1, at the Dairy Cooperative building in Salem. The program starts at 10:30 a.m.

The morning program includes the annual reports, and talk on "Mastitis and Its Treatment" by Dr. J. N. Schnautz, veterinarian at Oregon State college.

Afternoon discussion, as announced by Fred Davis, president from Woodburn, will include farmer experiences with making and feeding grass and legume silage. M. G. Huber, extension agriculture engineer from Oregon State college, will talk on silos and their construction.

All dairymen are invited, says Ben A. Newell, county extension agent. The meeting will be educational as well as revealing production records of high cows and herds in the county over the past year.

German Art Goes On Exhibit Friday

Portland, Nov. 26 (AP)—The 93 masterpieces of the Berlin collection went on public display at Portland art museum today.

Some 700 art museum members saw the exhibition—the most expensive collection ever shown in Portland—in a private showing last night. Army guards lined the corridors and show room.

The exhibit will remain here for a week.

One Boundary Change Approved by Board

Albany—Members of the Linn county district boundary board granted one petition for a boundary change but took under advisement another, involving Albany district No. 5 and Grand Prairie district No. 14.

The petition for transfer of about 40 acres from McDowell district No. 62 to Over the Top district 138 was granted when no objections were presented before the board.

Requests for extension of Albany's district boundaries to include about 200 acres now in the Grand Prairie district, however, met strong resistance from residents of district 14 at a hearing held Monday.

Fertilizer Situation Reported Still Tight

The nitrogen fertilizer situation continues to be tight throughout the country, says Harry Riches, county extension agent, and the nitrogen for next spring applications may be scarce and supplies hard to locate.

However, there is a temporary situation at the present time because of shipping facilities, due to car shortage, and some fertilizer production allocated for other areas is piling up at the Salem fertilizer plant.

Farmers in this part of the valley may obtain some of their next year's needs during November and December and place it in storage.

A good procedure would be to place an order through your local dealer, then take delivery of the fertilizer material at the plant.

Growers Here Talk Turkey

Talking turkey was the order of business last Tuesday evening, when the Marion County Turkey Growers association met in Salem.

Noel Bennion, extension poultryman from Oregon State college, said a recent survey of hatcherymen indicated about 25 percent more breeder hens would be kept this year over 1947.

Words of caution were expressed by both growers and processors over the egg poul set-up.

Growers were urged to consider carefully the favorable market for hen birds now, and the high costs of carrying birds through the winter and laying season. There is only one market for turkey eggs, and that is the hatchery.

Oregon now rates fifth in the United States for the production of meat birds, according to Mr. Bennion. However, about 50 percent of this production is marketed in the east.

William Chase, president of the county turkey group, said consumption of turkey in Oregon had increased over 100 per-

Medal Awarded Florian Oppek

Fort Lewis, Wash., Nov. 26—While 15,000 troops of the Second Infantry Division and Fort Lewis marched in his honor, Sgt. Florian J. Oppek of Salem, Ore., received the Bronze Star medal from Maj. Gen. Henry J. Collins, post and division commander, for his service during the war.

Oppek entered the army in March, 1941, at Worthington, Minn., where he was employed by a lumber concern and was a mail carrier.

Following his training at Ft. Francis E. Warren, Cheyenne, Wyo., he went to Europe as a surgical technician, and served in North Africa, Sicily, Italy, France and Germany.

Oppek's most outstanding action was in giving aid to a tank officer in the midst of an artillery barrage.

At present, he is operating a farm near Salem.
