Citizens Ask For New Bridge

Residents of North Church street near Mill creek want a new bridge over the creek, but they probably will have to wait until late next year before they get it. A well-signed petition from the residents reached the city council Monday night, declaring the old bridge is past its usefulness and no longer worth repairing. They ask for a modern one. There is little left of the old one to repair, they said, and its condition at best is such that vehicles crossing it make a lot of noise, which is a big nuisance at night. City Manager J. L. Franzen told the council that bids had been called for no less than three times for construction of a new one, but no bids had come. However, he explained that the new interceptor sewer will run under the bridge, and that the economical thing to do would be to wait until the sewer construction at that point comes along. City Engineer J. H. Davis said this would be toward the end of next year. The manager was instructed

Strand Talks on Foreign Students

One of the more pertinent changes in American college campus life is the large influx of foreign students. The number has increased rapidly since the end of World War II and may be expected to increase, said Dr. A. L. Strand, president of Oregon State college as he discussed this phase of education for the benefit of Chamber of Commerce diners Monday noon. Oregon State, Dr. Strand said, now has 83 foreign students on its campus, including 27 from China, seven from Burma, three from Persia and others from Egypt, Iceland, Norway, Pakistan, Sumatra, South Africa and England. Dr. Strand spoke of the benefits to be derived from the exchange student program as sponsored by the Fullbright bill. In this connection, the speaker said the exchange student project should be of material assistance to the Marshall plan. There is a danger that foreign students may not secure in this country that which will be of the greatest possible advantage to them when they return home, Dr. Strand said. "They should attend council meetings, school board meetings and similar conference dealing with American life." Dr. Strand said there was no problem of racial discrimination at Oregon State.

FIRST IT WAS HEADLESS ROOSTER Now 1200-Year-Old Frog Rates Name of Lazarus

Angels Camp, Calif., (AP)—A 1,200-year-old frog was entered today under the name of Lazarus in the latest stunt in connection with the Calaveras county jumping frog contest. The frog, embedded in a chunk of glacier ice, was entered by Dr. D. L. Albasio, Angels camp physician. Other authorities to the contrary, Dr. Albasio said the frog might be revived when the ice was melted. "There seems to be no known limits to the powers of a frog or other reptiles to revive after long periods of dormancy," he said. Dr. Albasio, an amateur student of glaciers, said he found the frog in the Dana glacier at Yosemite park. He estimated the ice to be at least 1200 years old. He was keeping it in a deep freeze cabinet and said he would try to revive the frog some time next week. The contest, based on Mark Twain's story of an early-day contest, will be held May 13, 14 and 15.
