Dim View Taken of 'Frog's Revival'—Dr. D. L. Albasio, assisted by Nurse June North, administers stimulants to "Lazarus," a "frog" which the physician asserts he found embedded in 1200-year-old chunk of ice in Yosemite national park. Dr. Albasio claimed he revived the frog and will enter him in the famed Calaveras county jumping frog jubilee at Angeles Camp, Calif. Scientific authorities have taken a dim view of the whole thing and University of California paleontologists doubted that a frog could exist for 1200 years in ice. (Acme Telephoto)

SECRETS OF BURIED 'TREASURE'

Frozen Jumping Frog 'Unfrozen'

Angeles Camp, Calif. (AP)—Mark Twain might envy the tall tales they still spin about the jumping frog of Calaveras county.

Twain, of course, spun the first one about the frog which was so loaded with buckshot by a hostile gambler that he lost the contest.

Earlier this week Dr. D. L. Albasio of Angeles Camp announced with tongue in cheek—he had chipped a frozen frog out of a Yosemite glacier and would try to awaken him from a sleep of 1,200 years in time for the next contest May 13-14-15.

So the frog was "unfrozen" for photographers and was quite alive. The "Glacier" was a press agent's dream—an ordinary block of ice.
