Franzen Talks

were given Franzen a year or more ago that the city's needs would be taken care of.

"We have not yet gone so far as to make an estimate of cost," Franzen said. "It will be quite expensive. It is 50 miles from Salem and 30 from Stayton. That is quite a distance, but many cities go farther than that for their water sources."

"The main thing now is to get the plan included in the design of the Big Cliff dam." The city manager and Manager Carl Guenther of the city water department have given considerable thought to the future need of additional reservoirs. No exact locations have been fixed.

In general it is probable that one or more large reservoirs will, over the long-range, be located in the hills east of Salem and back of the state institutions. Another is contemplated west of the Willamette river in the hills back of West Salem. All of these locations have sufficient elevation, Franzen said.

For additional water capacity within the city of Salem Franzen said the present 10,000,000-gallon reservoir on Rural avenue can be added to, as can also the half-million-gallon reservoir on Candalaria Heights. In the Downs addition is a quarter-million-gallon standpipe, and so others can be installed. One the high level tank near the large reservoir.
