Goodyear Blimp Again to Make Overnight Visit Here

The Goodyear blimp Volunteer is scheduled to pay another call to Salem for an overnight visit, Harland Brock, local Goodyear distributor for the rubber company, announced today.

The ex-navy blimp is scheduled to fly in from North Bend Friday, weather permitting. While here it will again mast at McNary field in approximately the same section of the field where it was moored a year ago.

The Volunteer can be flown by one person, but for a traveling operation such as this one which extends over weeks or months, the crew comprises 14 men, including three pilots, crew chief, and crew members who land the ship, handle radio communications, check weather, and perform essential maintenance.

Captain of the non-rigid airship is R. H. Hobensack, pilot-in-charge of west coast operations, who has logged more than 14,000 hours in lighter-than-air craft and has been flying the Goodyear blimps for the past 20 years. Among his many flying achievements are the flying of the first non-rigid airship south of the Equator and the first lighter-than-air flight to Brazil.

The 150-foot craft is inflated with 123,000 cubic feet of non-inflammable helium and is powered by two Warner-Scarab engines. Cruising speed is 45 mph while top speed is about 65 mph.

Salem residents are invited to inspect the airship, the only one presently in operation west of the Mississippi river, and are welcome to watch the landing procedures prior to its scheduled departure for Seattle on May 7.
