

Ham and Eggs For a Penny

Los Angeles, May 12 (AP)—Two price-warring drug stores served breakfasts for a penny apiece today.

The war began a week ago when one drug store opened across a busy street intersection from the other in the Westchester district. Price cuts on some 50 items followed, hitting the one-cent breakfast bottom yesterday.

Store Managers Tom Carpenter and T. Z. Mays kept shuttling back and forth across the street, checking each other's prices and cutting their own.

Both said they were backed "to the limit" by the chains which own their stores.

Parochial School Pupils Are Heard

Stayton—A program was given at the school gymnasium recently by instrumental students of St. Mary's parochial school, attended by parents and friends.

participating were Marjorie Silbermann, senior; Shirley Ann Kintz, junior; Carol O'Connor, Dorena Fera, freshmen; Kathleen Perry; Doris Lambrecht; Shirley Schottelbauer, Lydia Mae Kline, Marjorie Foster; Lois O'Connor, Marilyn Norder, Arden Hammer, Sharon Meyerhofer, Joanne Albus, Carol Frank, Lanita Boedigheimer, Mary E. Perry, Nancy Nelson, Linda Van Handel, Rita Deitel, Allan Doster, Robert Anderson, Marjorie O'Connor, Joan Shaw and Janet Clarke.

The choral number, "My Own United States," was sung by the music class. The Gregorian Ave Maria was sung a capella. "That Wonderful Mother of Mine" was sung by the low intermediate students of the school. Marjorie Foster, Harry Pietruk, Harold Pietruk, Gary Spaniol, Margaret Buschitz, Katherine Kirsh, Terrence Frost, Shirley Welter, Leroy Fulle, Donald Murphy, Arlene Byrd and Dale Hubel.

Taking part in the Irish Lilt were Lanita Boedigheimer, Marjorie Foster, Sharon Meyerhofer, Joanne Albus, and Carol Frank. Effective Irish costumes were used. Lydia Mae Kline was accompanist.

Children who were prevented from taking part in the April program, because of illness, will play their musical numbers at the next Mother's club meeting, May 20, at the school. They are Marcella Parrish, Maralee Frost, Daria Darby and Rose Marie Freres. At that time the first and second grade students will entertain their mothers with choral verse, vocal and rhythm orchestra numbers.

Santiam Grangers Oppose Fast Time

Lyons met—Santiam Valley grange met at the grange hall and voted to oppose daylight saving time. Giles Wagner was elected gatekeeper to replace Glen Rogers. June Hampton at Pomona was elected to replace Leala May White. At the lecturer's hour the Camp Fire girls of Mehama furnished the entertainment, with songs, dances, baton drill and negro skit. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served. The next meeting a strawberry feed will be held.

Preliminaries Start For Lebanon Building

Lebanon—Workmen felled a massive maple Friday and began ground leveling operations preparatory to erection of a new business building on North Main street which will house a dress shop, a restaurant and a jewelry store. The new building will be located between the J. C. Penney store and Standley's service station.

Den-Herder's excavators are in charge of preparation for construction.

Closing Youth Rally Scheduled at Amity

Amity—The last Youth Rally for the season will be held at the grade school gymnasium, Saturday night at 8 o'clock. Entertainment, choruses, duet, instrumental numbers, talent from Multnomah School of the Bible, with Richard Patty, master of ceremonies, are scheduled numbers on the program.

The speaker is Rev. Arthur Hoensch of Dallas, an outstanding youth leader of this region.

Entire Blood Change—Louis Castellanos, 28, army veteran, gets a new supply of blood in an unusual try to reduce leukemia. His normal 8 to 10 pints will be entirely new after an expected 30 or more pints are passed through him. His father, F. G. Castellanos, watches Nurse Mary Crooks and Dr. Francisco Sanchez. Spruce Budworm Threatens Heavy Oregon Forest Loss

Dallas, May 12—A new threat to Oregon's forests, potentially greater than fire, was voiced in a talk by Lynn Cronemiller, assistant state forester, at a dinner meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

The menace—the spruce budworm—brings a different type of challenge to protection efforts of such organizations as Keep Oregon Green and the entire population of the state.

Contrary to its name, the spruce budworm is no respecter of other kinds of trees and is fond of Douglas fir, Cronemiller said. In an area from Oakridge to Crawfordville, 130,000 acres of timber has been attacked by the insects, and forestry officials plan to wage war on them beginning on May 23, during the insects' two-weeks feeding period.

Fifteen airplanes and three helicopters will cover the area with DDT spray.

An infestation in the Mount Hood National forest is causing concern in the city of Portland. An area of 100,000 acres is under attack by the budworm, and left unchecked, could sweep the entire forest region. This poses a definite threat to the Bull Run watershed, and should it become necessary to spray with DDT near the reservoir, trouble might result to the city's water supply, Cronemiller stated.

Failure of congress to appropriate funds to combat the budworm in the national forest by the time of the insects' feeding period means a year's delay in the plan to control them, the assistant state forester declared. Although the appropriation may be forthcoming by June of this year, the damage will have been done with the feeding period passed. In three years, the budworms kill a tree.

The pestiferous budworm multiplies amazingly fast. Recently an 18-inch branch which had been infested was cut and placed in an incubator in Hood River. Within a week, 750 budworms had hatched and at the latest count the number had grown to 1500.

Cronemiller suggests that everyone concerned with the problem contact congressmen to impress them with the urgency of the situation and the need for appropriations to wipe out the new threat to state of Oregon forests.
