Fraser River Flood Continues Receding

Vancouver, B. C., May 20 (CP)—The potentially dangerous Fraser river is continuing to recede and flood control officials said today the danger of a flood in the Fraser valley appears to be over. The river—which two weeks ago posed a "distinct flood threat"—continued to recede during the last 24 hours. Steadily falling stages are being recorded at almost all reporting stations. Cooler weather forecast for the next 24 to 48 hours will help to keep the river within its banks, officials said.

Unusual hot weather early this month caused an early, rapid run-off and heightened the danger of another flood crisis. However a cooler spell of weather this week checked the run-offs, described today as "satisfactory."

Pioneer Trust Offices Rebuild

Remodeling of the offices of the Pioneer Trust company at an expenditure of several thousand dollars will start Monday, Henry V. Compton, vice president of the company, announced Friday.

Plans were drawn by Lyle V. Bartholomew, architect, and the contract has been let to Barham Brothers.

The general purpose of the alterations is to give more working space for all departments—insurance, auditing, bookkeeping, and the general offices—and greater convenience to the public.

The construction of all counters and partitions will conform in appearance, with counters of marble, walnut trimming for doors and tellers' windows, and upper part of partitions of translucent glass.

At the east end of the lobby will be a new glazed walnut partition and door on the existing counters on the lobby side of the ladies' lounge. The new partition will match the existing partition on the lobby side of the conference room.

To the present office space on the south side, adjoining the lobby, will be added office space on the west end of the lobby.

Room will be left, however, for a door in the west end of the lobby, opening into the offices of the Salem Title company in the same building. Many attorneys have offices on the upper floors of the Pioneer Trust building, and this door will give them and the public access to the title company's offices without going outdoors.

Communists

Attorney General Clark disclosed today that the justice department is investigating or taking action against "833 suspected subversive aliens."

He supplied the information in a letter read to a house judiciary subcommittee by immigration Commissioner Watson B. Miller. The letter strongly urged passage of a bill that would let the department jail deportable aliens like Gerhart Eisler.

Eisler, described by the house committee on un-American activities as the former No. 1 communist in the United States, is awaiting an extradition hearing in England after being taken off a Polish ship on which he escaped from this country as a stowaway. He was under bond in a deportation case and two criminal cases which are on appeal.

Rep. Hobbs (D-Ala.) testified that thousands of aliens have been ordered out of the country but: "They tell us to go to hell and there is nothing we can do about it."

Hospital Fire Believed Set

The state police arson squad thinks the $250,000 hospital fire at Fairview home Wednesday was set by a firebug. Suspected is an institution inmate.

Lt. Thomas Sheridan, head of the squad, said the fire broke out in a basement storeroom where beds and mattresses were stored. He said there was nothing there which could have caused a fire to start accidentally.

Hospital authorities reduced the damage estimate from $300,000 to $250,000, because they learned some of the equipment could be salvaged.

Dr. Irvin Hill, hospital superintendent, said he wants a new one-story hospital constructed to replace the burned two-story building.

4 OCE Students On Probation

Monmouth, May 20 — Four married GI students who were missing overnight from their homes in Vet Village at OCE in Monmouth were placed on probation at the college today pending outcome of an investigation being conducted by the college authorities.

A spokesman for the college said today that as far as has yet been determined the "disappearance" stems from entirely personal reasons on the part of one un-named student.

He said college authorities were satisfied that the students had not been involved in any accident nor gotten into any trouble of any kind. Any possible disciplinary action must await the outcome of further investigation, he declared.

The four were the object of a wide spread police search throughout the Willamette valley all day Thursday, after having been reported missing early Thursday morning. They had left the campus and attended a night baseball game in Salem and had been expected to return no later than mid-night.

None of the men was available for a statement.

Object of the search were Wayne A. Hubbard, 25, freshman from Powers; Bert McConnell, 26, freshman from Marcola; Sam Ramey, 26, senior from Ashland, and Bob McKeever, 29, junior from Long Beach, Calif. All are World War veterans and are married.
