State Employees Adopt Program

Aiming at a program that would not only be beneficial to state employees but one that would also promote more efficient service to the state and improve the welfare of the state in general, the board of directors of the Oregon State Employees association in an executive session in Salem Saturday took action to promote such a program.

Adopted by the group at the meeting called by Loren White, president, were:

1. Plans to extend the OSEA group life insurance service for employees to a larger number of people.
2. To investigate and urge improvement in Oregon's present labor laws which have to do with child labor, initiative to young women to work, and excessive red tape in the hiring of young people, thus discouraging their employment to proper jobs.
3. To lend support to legislative interim committees and Civil Service investigations concerning working conditions and other employer-employee relations.
4. To survey and investigate the training programs offered state employees and to determine the needs for in-service training of employees to improve their services to the state.
5. To give full cooperation with all officials, agencies and others striving to improve the welfare of the state, and to actively support those whose interests are sincere in this direction.
6. To preserve and improve the Civil Service principle of a merit system of personnel relations for the state, and to remain active in defense of the principles of justice, merit, honesty and sincerity as applied to public affairs.

Selected at the meeting as assistant to Forrest Stewart, executive secretary, was Eugene F. Schmidt of Salem, who this June will be graduated from Willamette university. Schmidt prior to enrolling at Willamette spent three and a half years on duty with the U.S. navy.

During its session the board also endorsed the current U.S. savings bond campaign and voted to support the campaign publicly and to the state employees through association publications.

MORE MILLS for MORE PRODUCTS for MORE JOBS

It is the Weyerhaeuser objective to make salable products from all the wood harvested on our tree farms. This is why we diversify our manufacturing—add new plants to make more products. To make the plan work efficiently, we group these different types of plants at one millsite. In this way, from the left-over sound wood of sawmills and planing mills and from logs not made into plywood or lumber we can make wood pulp, Pres-to-logs, Silvacon bark products and other useful items. Grouping mills reduces administration, transportation, power and other important costs. This also makes it economically sound to bring in low value material formerly left in the woods. Whole crop utilization requires more men in the woods and more men in the plants. Besides creating jobs and more products, plant integration furthers permanent operation and greater community stability.
