

Time to Spray Coddling Moth

The first cover spray for moth control in apples and pears should be applied now, according to B. G. Thompson, entomologist at Oregon State college. Coddling moths are present and now laying eggs. The spray must be applied before these eggs start hatching around June 7.

The recommended spray is powdered lead arsenate used at the rate of three pounds to 100 gallons of water. Where wormy apples from coddling moth are not a serious problem, two pounds of lead arsenate to 100 gallons of water will prevent worm injury.

Another suggested spray is three pounds of powdered calcium arsenate to 100 gallons of water. Tests by O.S.C. entomologists have shown that calcium arsenate is only slightly less effective than lead arsenate in coddling moth control under Willamette valley conditions.

DDT has proven very effective for coddling moth control. However, results the past few years have shown that the seasonal use of DDT may cause one or more of the following complications:

1. It may increase the population of several species of mites with consequent severe injury.
2. It may increase the population of the woolly apple aphid which in turn may increase damage from perennial canker.
3. It may create a new pest control problem with insects which now are of little or no economic importance.

For those orchardists who propose to substitute DDT for lead arsenate in coddling moth control this season, the following is suggested: two or three applications of DDT should be made during the season. The first application, two pounds of 50 per cent wettable DDT to 100 gallons of water, should be made now.

Dr. Thompson stresses thorough application. This means a protective film on the foliage and the entire surface of every apple and pear. Thorough application is particularly important in the upper portion of the tree. More than half of the coddling moth eggs are laid in the upper third of the tree.

World Famous Clyde Beatty Heads Circus Features

the most daring wild animal trainer the world has ever known

A long, black whip in the hands of a dark-haired, handsome youth, will flick and snap across a 40-foot iron-encircled arena.

Vicious looking lions and tigers will snarl and slap at him as he moves about through the sawdust,—a chair and pistol in his left hand and a rawhide whip in the right.

That young man will be Clyde Beatty, the greatest and most fearless wild animal trainer the world has ever known, the featured attraction in the huge Clyde Beatty Circus, coming to Salem, Monday, June 6, for afternoon and night performances at Fair Grounds Parking lot.

The same Beatty who has been ripped and torn by the beasts many times, yet lived to continue his death-defying display. Several times, death seemed inevitable, but the plucky youth lived to carry on his suicidal vocation,—training lions and tigers,—the most dangerous and treacherous beasts that breathe.

This year, he has enlarged his display to 40 newly imported beasts,—the largest number ever before presented by the famed Beatty, and the biggest display of its kind in all circus history.

The Big Show, and it is big,—being one of America's two largest shows, will bring scores of new attractions. A whole herd of performing elephants, companies of educated horses and ponies, and groups of trained canines, monkeys, and zebras and, for the youngsters, a small army of clowns and their clown animals.

Performances are scheduled to begin at 2:30 and 8:00 p. m. each day. A gorgeously produced professional pageant entitled "The Circus On Parade" opens the performances.
