Without Arms, Japanese Work

Washington, June 11 (AP)—The United States declared Friday the Japanese are now "completely disarmed" and working to become self supporting as soon as possible.

Rejecting attacks on the U. S. decision to halt Japanese war reparations, a formal government statement said this and other U. S. actions in Japan were dictated by "hard necessity."

The statement renewed the American contention that Japan is unable to pay further war damages without impeding its recovery. Restoring the Japanese to self-support, it said, is the "only course offering real hope of preventing a future renewal of Japanese militarism."

The statement was issued by the state department in behalf of the army and other agencies in reply to criticism of China, the Philippines and other Pacific allies.

The United States last month halted any further reparations deliveries and announced it would oppose any effort to revive the war damage payments to the Philippines, China and others which had received them.
