

Speed Limit Removal Asked

Beginning of service through Salem by a Southern Pacific streamliner, the "Shasta Daylight," on July 10, the railroad company is asking the city to rescind the ordinance fixing railway speed limits through the city.

The present limit is 20 miles an hour between Marion and Mission and 35 miles south of Mission. The company asks removal of that limit and agrees instead to limit its speed to 20 miles along the paved portion of 12th street.

The necessity of removing all obstacles so that running time may be reduced is the reason for the request.

Alderman David O'Hara said he thought speed limits of trains was no longer a matter of city regulation. He thought it was put into the hands of the public utilities commission in 1947. The question was referred to City Attorney Chris J. Kowitz.

Millmen Reject Pay Rise Offer

Portland, June 14 (AP)—Idle AFL millmen here have rejected a 1 1/2 cent an hour wage increase offered by Portland employers. The wage dispute spread to 40 Oregon plants April 22.

A union spokesman said members turned down the offer by a vote of 402 to 0. The union had asked a 17 1/2 cent an hour increase. The present scale ranged from $1.45 to $1.77 1/2 an hour.

A spokesman for the employer groups reported the wage scale offer also included six paid holidays if they fell during a five day work week and a special accident work week and a seniority agreement.

Upstate plants were closed after pickets appeared at a Portland plant. Eugene workers have since reached a separate agreement.

Brown or Blue Eyes in Children? Classmates to Wed and Find Out

Seattle, June 14 (AP)—A microbiologist and a premedie who had been classmates in embryology will be married Wednesday to settle a scientific argument on heredity. Priscilla Ione Tomlinson, 20, brown-eyed, premedie, and microbiologist Hugh Tandy Gardner, 24, blue-eyed, have been arguing over whether brown or blue eyes will predominate in children. To answer the question, Hugh challenged Priscilla, queen of the University of Washington campus last year, to marry him and settle the controversy. She accepted.

Grange Asked To Support CVA

Coos Bay, June 14 (AP)—The Coos Grange convention delegates turned to committee work today after hearing a defense of the proposed Columbia Valley Administration and the Brannan Farm program. Assistant Secretary of the Interior C. Girard Davidson told some 700 delegates last night the fight over the CVA was the same as those in years past when the farmers supported public power and submitted projects.

Earlier, State Grange Master Morton Tompkins backed the proposal for a Columbia valley administration and spoke favorably of the farm program of Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brannan. Tompkins said Brannan's plan would eliminate a situation where the consumer is subsidizing farm commodity prices with taxes and then is forced to pay higher food prices. He said the Grange should favor setting aside all Columbia river tributaries below the McNary dam, except the Willamette as fish sanctuaries.
