Bluff of Eastern Cherry Buyers About to Be Called

The bluff of eastern buyers who are trying to hammer down the price of cherries to be paid Oregon growers is about to be called.

This is indicated in a telegram to the Capital Journal from Senator Wayne L. Morse, who says he will disclose before the senate the tactics of the eastern buyers.

He adds that the scare about Italian cherries being dumped on the American market because of tariff cuts is groundless.

From information given him by state department and agricultural officials Morse says "I am satisfied there is absolutely no basis in fact for representation being made by eastern buyers that Oregon cherry growers they cannot pay more than 4 1/2 to 5 cents a pound for cherries because of a threatened 50 percent cut in the cherry tariff in any national reciprocal trade agreement."

Webb Letter Quoted

Senator Morse in his telegram sets out in full a letter he has received from James L. Webb, assistant secretary of state, in which the secretary says that any of the trade agreements cannot be given out in advance. But the burden of his letter indicates there is no reason for any scare about a wholesale dumping of Italian cherries on the American market because of drastic tariff cuts.

"The trade agreements committee must of necessity keep in mind the statement made by President Truman to the effect that the trade agreement authority would not be used in such a way as to endanger segments of American industry, American labor or American agriculture," says Webb's letter to Senator Morse. "A record of 15 years of careful administration does not support the claims of eastern buyers of Oregon cherries that the market will be flooded with Italian cherries as a result of a possible trade concession made at the negotiations."

Before Senate Friday

He says that as a result of this letter from Mr. Webb and conferences with other officials he will go before the senate Friday and make a public disclosure of the information he has at hand and says he is satisfied that the bluff of eastern buyers will be called.

He suggests that the growers try to work out an arrangement whereby the price will be a reasonably higher figure if there is no drastic cut, and a lower figure on a sliding scale if there is a tariff cut.
