

Jake Bird to Appeal Again

Walla Walla, Wash., June 20 (AP)—"Hex" murder Jake Bird, now under his fourth sentence of hanging, once again has moved into his legal bag of tricks in an effort to escape the gallows.

His date with the noose only 25 days away, the 47-year-old convicted slayer said he planned to again appeal his case to the Washington state supreme court.

Found guilty of the ax-murder of Mrs. Bertha Kludt of Tacoma, Wash., almost two years ago, Bird has used his prison-acquired knowledge of law to delay his execution three times. His appeals have been denied by the U. S. supreme court, the ninth circuit court at San Francisco, and the Pierce County (Wash.) superior court as well as the state supreme court.

Bird's appointed attorney, Murray Taggart, said he planned to appeal this time on the grounds that a confession by Bird to the murder of Mrs. Kludt was beaten out of him by police. He appealed to the state court on several other points before. Taggart said he would take the appeal to the U. S. supreme court once again if the state supreme court denied it.

Beals Calls Attention to Changes in State Egg Law

O. K. Beals, chief, division of foods and dairies, Oregon state department of agriculture, calls attention to the Oregon poultry industry to changes involving the sale and handling of eggs in Oregon provided in amendments to Oregon's egg law made by the 1949 legislature.

Mr. Beals emphasizes the fact that the changes incorporated into the law were sponsored before the legislative session by Oregon's poultry industry working through its established organizations.

"It is believed," said Mr. Beals, "that the changes made in the law will make possible more comprehensive scrutiny of trade in eggs on a state-wide basis as well as provide for greater efficiency in the use of personnel working on this matter."

Licensing requirements are on a state-wide basis and become effective on July 1.

The new license schedule provides that all holders of egg dealer's permits pay a minimum annual license fee of $2, plus 3 cents per case or unit of 30 dozen eggs, for each case or unit over 200. These fees are to be paid each January 1 and July 1 and based on reports provided to the departments on those dates.

A credit will be granted all holders of egg dealer's permits now in effect. This provision is a part of the amended law.

No changes in grade and size standards were made in the law. Under the egg law, every retailer, wholesaler, jobber or other dealer in eggs must have a state egg dealer's permit if eggs are to be candled or graded.

Another important change includes the wholesaler in the labeling provisions. This requires that all eggs sold, offered or moved for sale to any retailer or consumer must contain certain information on every case, carton or other container of eggs. The information required on this labeling must show (1) the grade and size designation in conformance with these provisions of the state egg law; and (2) the name and address of the producer, wholesaler or retailer by or for whom the eggs were graded or packed. This information must be
