Will's Observes 70th Birthday

Will's Music store, among the older of Salem businesses and regarded by Saul Janz, present proprietor, as being the oldest store devoted exclusively to music on the Pacific coast, is now observing its 70th anniversary. Mr. Janz recalls that George C. Will opened his first store in the Stewart block on Commercial street in Salem some time during 1879. Previously Will had been in the gun business in Albany.

During those early days in Salem the store stocked sewing machines and musical instruments and not infrequently Mr. Will loaded his merchandise aboard a wagon and peddled his wares through neighboring communities. Sometimes he was out for days at a time but he always returned with the wagon empty.

About 1880 the business was moved into the Murphy building, then known as the Griswold block. Salem city directory for 1890 gives the store its previous address in the Stewart block and Mrs. Margaret A. Will says the store was returned to its former location in the late 1880s. Very shortly thereafter the present location was acquired and a music store has been in operation at State street for nearly 60 years. No other Salem enterprise is known to have occupied a retail location for so long an interval.

George C. Will, at the age of 85, died July 23, 1944. He was born at Bethel, Mo., March 15, 1859. In 1883 he crossed the plains with his parents and became a member of the Aurora community. He was a member of several Salem civic organizations.

A few months after the death of Mr. Will, Saul Janz, who has had 25 years of experience in the music business here, first with Sherman, Clay and later with Mr. Will, acquired the business. In August of 1948 Vernon Wiscarson, former superintendent of instrumental music in Salem schools, became associated with the firm.

Fred Blevins Injured In Portland Crash
Portland, June 25 (AP)—A Salem man is in a hospital here with multiple rib fractures resulting from a two-car collision just south of the Milwaukee office of the state police early today.

He is Fred A. Blevins, 36, of 671 N. 20th st., Salem. His condition was reported fair.

The driver of the other car, Harold W. Manning, 28, Milwaukee, suffered a right arm fracture. Police said cause of the crash was not clear.

30 Mexican Families Here to Help Harvest
Thirty families of English speaking Mexicans from Waco, Texas, have reached Salem to assist in the harvest of seasonal crops and are now engaged in picking cherries in the Ross Clark orchards of Polk county. One hundred acres of this orchard remains to be harvested.

The new arrivals, brought here as the result of negotiations conducted by telephone, are being housed in the farm labor camp near the airport. They are described as being excellent workers as well as congenial.

W. H. Baillie, manager of the Salem office of the state employment service, reported Saturday that, barring rain, the cherry crop will suffer little loss.

Archduke Otto To Speak Here

Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne of Austria, described as a "young man with an European background who thinks American" will highlight the 1949-50 season of the Salem Knife and Fork club. Contracts have been signed with five of the eight speakers who will appear. Otto, who speaks excellent English, was condemned to death in absentia by the Germans during the World War. He will appear on the October program.

The series will feature the adventure type of speaker to a certain extent, with Carlos Fallon, former chief of the Colombian navy, and now an American citizen, stressing this department in his address on the subject, "I Became a Yankee."

The humorist for the series will be Ed Harding who will appear in January. "He looks funny, acts funny and knows how to tell funny stories," points out advance information concerning his ability.

Circuit Judge Geo. H. Hardy, Jr., of Shreveport, La., will discuss "God, the Supreme Court and Us" during his dinner engagements with the Knife and Forkers.

Imre Kovacs has been selected to give the political talk of the series.

An additional three lecturers are now in the process of being selected.

The first dinner meeting will be held in September at a date yet to be selected.

The committee that had the responsibility of selecting the speakers consisted of the officers and board of the club, headed by W. W. McKinney who served as president. Dr. Daniel Schulze will preside during the approaching season.

Eagles Wind-up Convention

Pendleton, June 25 (AP)—The fourth annual state convention of Oregon Eagles headed toward its closing sessions today amid a riot of color and politics.

But it will be more colorful than political. All but one of the top officers named by the nominating committee are certain to be elected since only one name will appear on ballots for these positions. There will, however, be a race for two subordinate offices.

Nominees for positions not to be contested are Webb Loy, Bend, worthy president; Roy Jewell, The Dalles, vice president; Dr. Floyd L. Utter, Salem, chaplain; Jack Henry, Klamath Falls, conductor; Chester Capon, Portland, inside guard; and James Simms, Salem, delegate to the August Grand Aerie convention in Detroit, Mich.

Voters will select for the treasurer's post either George Johnson, Lakeview, or C. E. Mack, Astoria.

One of these three will be picked for outside guard; Dick Chapman, Coos Bay; Ben Miller, Eugene; or Harry Quaring, Portland.

Voters will elect three of these men as trustees: B. L. Price, Pendleton; L. C. Hawes, La Grande; D. N. Lloyd, Selma; Carl Pritz, Portland; or Bill Lasko, Astoria.

Successful candidates for contested positions will not be announced until after a big parade this afternoon. At the same time winning drill and drum and bugle teams will be named.

The convention will wind up with a ball tonight.

Winners in the Manbrin Gardens home landscape contest were announced Friday night, first place honors going to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth C. Bell, 4225 Shoreline drive.

Second place honors went to Mr. and Mrs. Leo H. Johnson, 4255 River Crest drive, and the third place to Mr. and Mrs. Claude Miller, 4245 Shoreline drive.

A committee of judges from the Salem Men's Garden club did the judging. All 72 homes in the district were included in the contest. The Paaky McFarland home at 545 Manbrin drive and the S. J. Crouch home, 4245 River Crest drive, received the honorable mention placings.

At the conclusion of the judging the committee called at the winning homes, wishing to see the interiors of the homes, also, and R. S. Klover, president of the Manbrin Gardens Community club, accompanied them and presented the ribbons to the winners. The judging was done on the basis of relation to the type of house.

Awards in the contest were given by Ferrill nurseries, who presented the first prize; Doerfler & Sons nursery, who gave the second award; and Inler landscape firm, who presented the third prize.

Both Mr. Klover, president of the community club promoting the contest, and William Breedlove, who worked on the event, expressed satisfaction at the response to the contest. "The Manbrin Gardens district takes pride in its community," Klover said.

Hold Elections

The return of Leopold is opposed by the socialists, communists and most liberals. The social Christians promise that if they form the government they will hold an early referendum on the royal issue. Voting will take place Sunday, and women will cast their ballots for the first time in Belgium. Voting is compulsory.

Paul-Henri Spaak, premier and minister of foreign affairs, is up for reelection. Syria is holding a rubber stamp election day—there is only one presidential candidate on the ballot. He is Col. Husni Zayim, military governor of the country since he ousted the previous regime last March. Besides approving Zayim as president, the people are asked to vote on whether they want free elections held regularly and a new constitution.
