

Kingwood Zoning Question Sent Back to Commission

The question of zoning the Kingwood annexation in West Salem was referred back to the planning and zoning commission by the city council Monday night, with the request that it give another public hearing.

It was before the council for hearing Monday night, and the ordinance bill was introduced, but it was shown that at the previous hearing before the zoning commission only a few of the people of the area appeared. Although the meeting was regularly advertised some of those most interested failed to see the notices.

Among those asking for some deviation from that part of the area proposed for Class I residential were Phil Peterson, E. J. Becker, and the Beckman Gardens, all having businesses in the area.

Invoked in the question was a protest against the proposed widening of Glen Creek road from 40 to 80 feet. Immediate widening was not proposed, and existing buildings would not be disturbed, the protesters were told.

Fire Chief W. P. Roble got permission from the council for waiver of fees for West Coast Shows, which will appear in Salem as a benefit to help finance the convention of the Oregon State Fire Chiefs' association here next year.

Elmer M. Amundson charged that the Salem school board is unlawfully refusing to remove its facilities from Alder street. It was referred back to the planning and zoning commission.

A letter from Congressman Walter Norblad said he had submitted to the army engineers the matter of having Shelton ditch improved by the government. This was at the request of City Manager J. L. Franzen, who told the council that the city engineering department is rocking the ditch to serve until the army engineers can get to the job.

On recommendation of the city manager the council accepted an offer from Willis B. Sullivan to deed the city property on Fairoakes way in West Salem for street purposes.

The speed of Southern Pacific trains through Salem will be regulated by the public utilities commission, not by the city council. The SP applied two weeks ago for removal of restrictions. City Attorney Chris J. Kowitz reported to the council that the PUC has jurisdiction.

An ordinance will be introduced at the next meeting, conforming to a planning and zoning commission recommendation, for cancellation of the name of Charles street in the Kingwood annexation for the

Etzel to Serve As Grand Knight

Stayton—In election of officers at Sublimity, Ted Etzel of route 1, Stayton, was elected grand knight by a unanimous vote. Etzel has been active in Knights of Columbus work for the past 15 years, having been general chairman of the blood donor's program for the past two years, one of the most outstanding in the west.

Elected to serve with the grand knight were Vincent Mertz, deputy grand knight; Peter J. Gries, chancellor; George Basl, recorder; Andy A. Kintz, treasurer; Roy S. Keirse, advocate; Andy Silbernagel, warden; Leo Basl, inside guard; Joseph Jackson, outside guard; Merrill Brassfield, trustee. Announcement of the appointment of financial secretary by the supreme knight, and the chaplain by the newly-elected grand knight, will be made later.

The council voted active participation in the Santiam Bean Festival, including an entry of a float in the grand parade and operation of a concession. Backing will also be given the Catholic Daughters of America in supporting its candidate for "Jack of the Beanstalk" contest.

Headed by Sylvester J. Smith, state deputy, a delegation from St. Paul visited the meeting, stressing the importance of a public speaking program with one planned by the local council beginning with the early fall meeting.

Father Leander Schneider of Jordan, chaplain, was given a substantial purse, as he is leaving on a month's visit in Wisconsin, the headquarters of the Salvatorian Fathers.

Visitors from Ohio

Grand Island—Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Wolfe and daughter, Carol, of Dayton, Ohio, and her father, George Antrim, 83, of Salem, were evening guests of Mr and Mrs. Dale L. Fowler. They are on their annual vacation and have visited relatives at The Dalles and Salem. Mr. and Mrs. Clark Noble of Unionvale, Mr. and Mrs. Worth Wiley were evening callers at the same home.
