

Puzzled Chimp—Pandora, the Philadelphia zoo's chimpanzee, appears slightly puzzled as he looks over six baby rhesus, South American ostriches, which were born at the zoo. The sextuplets were hatched from 16 eggs on which a male ostrich had been sitting for a month. Two of the new arrivals were albino ostriches, zoo officials pointed out. (AP Wirephoto.)

"Been an awful hard winter up there—22 feet of snow—the cubs was just tiny things. First thing I know, that old sow is chargin' right at me, she isn't 10 feet away.

"I dropped my camera and fired one with my shotgun. Hit her? Hell, man, she was 10 feet away and the birdshot blew back in my face!"

Trefzger said then the bear was upon him. "She lifted my scalp, picked up my arm and broke it. I passed out.

"When I came to, I couldn't see. Thought I was blind, but it was only blood. Looked
