MAKING REDUCING PLEASANT

Men Can Take Off Pounds Easier Than Women

By ELIZABETH TOOMEY

New York (U.P.)—Taking a few inches off a male waistline is easier than trimming down a woman's bulges, according to Betty Dean, reducing expert.

It has nothing to do with anatomy. It's just that the women are more inclined to snitch a soda in the middle of a diet.

"Men almost never cheat when I put them on a diet," Miss Dean said. "And if anybody asks for second helpings at the diet table, it's usually the women."

Miss Dean added men to her clientele after 12 years of watching women grimly work off extra pounds in her reducing salons. She decided, she says, that there must be a happier way.

Her solution was a fancy country club resort in Katonah, N.Y., with men as well as women on the guest list. She removed any trace of the milk farm atmosphere. And the psychology seems to be working.

She discovered a double advantage to having women do their reducing along with the men. The exercises take on a more social aspect in the first place.

Both men and women show

VISITORS here over the week-end were Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Kent, Jr. and son, Kerry, of Santa Rosa, Calif. They were guests of Mr. Kent's grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. O. H. Kent.

Upon leaving here, the visitors stopped at Albany to visit at the home of Mr. Kent's uncle, K. W. Kent and family, and at Ashland to visit his aunt, Mrs. Jay Cochran.

Utilities May Reduce Rates

Public Utilities Commissioner

George H. Flagg has authority to allow a power company to reduce its rates to meet local competition, Attorney General George Neuner ruled today.

Flagg had asked whether the Pacific Power and Light company could reduce its rates in The Dalles to meet competition of a peoples utility district.

The power companies claim they can even go so far as to make a local rate reduction without getting Flagg's permission. But Flagg said he believes he has the power to approve or reject all rate reductions. He says his authority over rate reductions is just the same as it is over proposed rate increases.

can lose weight as fast as is physically safe.

Everything goes nicely until one of the feminine guests suggests taking a solitary walk to the village.

"Then, Miss Dean sighs, 'I know I'd better walk along. She usually is heading straight for a chocolate bar or an ice cream soda.'"

Neuner said the rate reduction could be made by the company as long as the company took the loss of revenue itself. In other words, a company can't reduce rates in one city and then increase rates in other cities to make up for the loss.

The rates proposed by the company at The Dalles are about the same as those charged by the PUD. But they are considerably lower than those charged by the company in other cities.

The company told Flagg, however, that its proposed rates for The Dalles would be high enough to make a profit in that area.

The decision is of far-reaching importance to power companies over the entire state, because it will enable them to cut rates to meet competition of all public-ly-owned power systems.
