

Shasta Daylight Will be on Display Here Friday, July 8

Southern Pacific's new streamliner, Shasta Daylight, which will go into daily service between Portland and San Francisco Sunday, July 10, will be on public display at the Salem S. P. passenger station Friday, July 8, from 12 noon to 4 p.m., according to information received by C. A. Larson, ticket agent here.

Residents of Salem and vicinity are invited to go through the train during its stay here, Larson said. Visitors will entrain through the rear door at the end of the parlor-observation car and proceed through the train seeing the beautiful Timberline Tavern car, the tri-car diner, kitchen and coffee shop and several of the chair cars.

Built at a cost of $5,000,000 the two Shasta Daylights are declared to be the newest and most beautiful streamlined trains in America. Each carries 15 cars with a seating capacity of 442 passengers.

Features include "Skyview" windows, six inches taller and wider than ordinary train windows and equipped with "breather" sash which prohibits fogging; "feathertouch" doors that open and close automatically at a gentle touch; radio and public address systems throughout the train; zone heating that keeps cars at the same temperature here it will proceed to Portland where it will be on display Saturday 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. before the inaugural southbound run Sunday. The inaugural runs, both north and southbound, will carry capacity loads, according to advice received here. Included on the southbound run will be a delegation of approximately 150 from the Portland Chamber of Commerce who will meet with the San Francisco chamber at a luncheon Monday noon.

Included among the company officials who will be aboard the exhibition train will be C. E. Peterson of San Francisco, vice-president in charge of system passenger traffic.

Although Nevada is the sixth state in size, it is smallest in population.
