Check Made On Restaurants

Salem is expected to place in approximately the same place as a year ago when final compilations of a check of the restaurant conditions made two weeks ago by state and county sanitarians are completed. W. B. Quinn of the county health department stated Thursday. A year ago Salem rated third in the state.

The inspectors took a number of "swab tests" from dishes and other restaurant equipment, no advance notice having been made of the visitations. A tolerance count of 50 bacteria is permissible under state regulations.

Quinn states that there are approximately 25 mechanical dish washers being operated by Salem food dispensing shops. Use of chemicals for killing bacteria is dispensed with if dishes and utensils are permitted to remain in water of a temperature not less than 175 degrees for a period of two minutes. Diagrams of sinks for use in washing dishes by the hand method are available at the health department.

The modern dishwashing machine is virtually fool proof, Quinn states, although there is a tendency on the part of employees to grow a bit careless under the impression that the apparatus will care for all possible sanitary needs.

Dr. Miller to Ask Hearing

Dr. Horace G. Miller, State hospital psychiatrist who was fired yesterday for insubordination, said today he might demand a state civil service hearing.

"I have been deeply grieved by some of the trends and developments at the Oregon State hospital under the superintendency of Dr. Charles E. Bates, and the treatment that has been accorded some of my friends. I am considering having a civil service hearing."

Dr. Miller indicated that his purpose in demanding a hearing would be to clear himself of Dr. Bates' charges that Dr. Miller "was guilty of subversive activity and insubordination."

William Ryan, state supervisor of institutions, said he would welcome a hearing, and that he isn't afraid of any charges Dr. Miller might present. Ryan supported Dr. Bates, who was appointed superintendent only last year.

Dr. Miller said Dr. Bates called him into the superintendent's office yesterday and fired him.

Veldt Scene in West Salem

Banks of the Willamette river presented the appearance of an African veldt Wednesday afternoon as many animals far from indigenous to Oregon, casually grazed, much to the delight of Salem and West Salem children and to the surprise of passing motorists.

The visiting fauna was due to the illness of two lions belonging to the Pacific Northwest Amusement company, which was forced to stop and prepare crates to ship the stricken lions to California, consigned to a zoo at Thousand Oaks.

Supervising the transfer from cages to crates were John Beck, Oregon City, and N. A. Smith, Lewiston, Ida., owners of the show.

Interest in the lions switched to the other animals, with two dromedaries, four llamas and a three-month old buffalo taking advantage of the unscheduled stop and unexpected fresh grass.

Also in display for the amusement of the youngsters were a cage full of monkeys, a black panther, leopard, ocelot and an Alaskan honey bear.

Dr. Moore Talks On Atlantic Pact

Unless America is willing to pay the price it makes little difference whether it is a North Atlantic pact, an atomic bomb or something of a similar nature that seeks a way out of the tendency toward world conflict.

So stated Dr. Brooks Moore, pastor of the First Methodist church Thursday noon as he reviewed for the benefit of the Salem Lions club the controversial resolution submitted before the Methodists of Oregon during their recent conference at Ashland.

Prefacing his remarks with the statement that he was given a difficult assignment to speak for the entire denomination, a group that is probably the most democratic of all churches, Dr. Moore said that the conference was merely giving a minority group an opportunity to express its opinions. "And believe me, the resolution brought repercussions on the floor," he added.

"To a lot of people the North Atlantic pact is nothing more than an easy way out," continued Dr. Moore. He added that the pact has a chance for success if all peoples involved work and sacrifice for its principles. However, he stated, the hardest job faced by the American people is the task of living up to their democratic preachings.

"We too frequently believe in our preachings until the time comes to put them into practical use."

Lt. Mack C. Maison Dies In Plane Crash in Texas

Lt. Mack Cornett Maison, Salem navy man, lost his life Wednesday when the F4U Corsair plane he was flying crashed near Corpus Christi, Texas.

Maison, a pilot and a flight instructor stationed at Cabinnia field, Texas, was the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Maison of Salem. His father is Oregon state police superintendent, a brigadier general in the National Guard and assistant commander of the 41st division.

The naval officer was simulating a dog fight with a student in another plane when his plane went out of control and crashed on Laguna Madre. A navy spokesman stated that the cause of the accident was not immediately determined.

Born at Prineville, Oregon, June 19, 1922, Lt. Maison came to Salem with his parents in 1925. He attended Highland school, Parrish junior high school and was graduated from Salem senior high school.

Appointed to the U. S. naval academy by the late Sen. Charles McNary, the flier spent a year at Columbian preparatory school in Washington, D. C. before entering the naval academy. Graduated from the academy in 1943, though his record is with the class of 1944, Lt. Maison during the war served aboard carriers in the South Pacific.

Later the officer was transferred to the east coast and assigned to the carrier, USS Kearsarge. It was after a three year tour of sea duty that he was recently given the shore assignment and sent to Corpus Christi as a flight instructor, flying the fighter plane, F6F.

Lt. Maison received his training as a naval aviator at Ottumwa, Iowa, Jacksonville, Fla., and Corpus Christi, Texas, where he finished his career in the grade of lieutenant in the U. S. Navy.

Surviving besides his parents is a sister, Mrs. Kelton (Molly Jean) Lowery of Mississippi.

Atomic Bomb

He quit the commission May 10, testified that this country is "way out ahead" of other nations in the atomic field.

But he warned that to stay ahead, constant "boldness" and "speed" are required in research and development.

He told the committee, which has been looking into Hickenlooper's charges for the past five weeks, that the commission can be judged only on the results it has produced.

Dr. Benes (Continued from Page 1)
The nephew of the man who was one of the founders of the Czech republic told how Dr. Eduard Benes predicted the events to come. After Munich, Dr. Eduard Benes told him this: "If ever Czechoslovakia is bolshevized, it will not be because of Stalin but because of the betrayal of Daladier (French premier) and Chamberlain (who, with Daladier, signed Czechoslovakia away from Munich)."
"The only country that offered to help the Czechs in 1938 was Soviet Russia." The Czech president turned Russia's help down, the Willamette professor said, because "Dr. Benes learned that Stalin figured to beat Nazi Germany in six months and then bolshevize Germany."
Dr. Benes revealed also that when Hitler moved into Austria, Czech and Polish troops were offered to the western democracies on a march to Berlin, but the offer was turned down by the British and French. "The French were too much the cowards."
In suggesting the need for world leadership, Dr. Benes reminded his audience that "great leaders are not born in every century. A Lincoln is not born in every century."
His next talk will be given July 20.

Mr. Truman said the British financial crisis will not be covered in his economic message to congress next week—the report will deal only with the United States. He would not comment on the British situation, saying it is being discussed in Paris and London.
The economic message, he added, will give his views on the anti-inflation proposal of Senator Murray (D, Mont.), which recommends among other things a $15,000,000,000 standby public works program.
He said it also will answer the question whether he believes deflationary forces now outweigh inflationary forces.
The president, commenting on the suggestion of Senator Vandenberg (R, Mich.) that he lead a new crusade for peace, said he has been doing just that ever since he took office in April, 1945, and will continue to do so.
He said world disarmament is a matter now before the United Nations, until an atomic bomb control plan is agreed to, disarmament talk must be delayed.
Does this mean that the world is not heading toward peace? No, Mr. Truman replied. He said it is moving slowly and gradually toward this goal and he expressed confidence we will gradually get it.
