

In it all there was one bright spot—the Yankee Clipper. But then, this is a guy who makes a habit out of transforming the startling into a commonplace occurrence. It was only two weeks ago that—after missing half of the season—he came back to the New York Yankees. It is typical of Joe that in two weeks he made a team which some players never make in a lifetime—and then proved himself by winning the ball game. Joe sat out the late innings. He was tired, able only to climb wearily out of his uniform as he listened to the late innings on the radio in the American league dressing room. What did he have to say? "It's just swell to be playing again."

Takes to the Air Cardinal Red Schoendienst of the National league slides into second base and is out as Athletics' Eddie Joost, American league shortstop, takes to the air in an effort to compute a double play on Pee Wee Reese. Reese was safe on a fielder's choice when Chicago's Cass Michael, American league second baseman gobbled up his grounder. Joost's throw to first base was too late. Play came in fourth inning of All-Star game held at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, N. Y. The American All-Stars won 11 to 7. (AP Wirephoto)

DiMaggio Provides Only Thrill in All-Star Game

New York, July 13 (AP)—The National league moaned today about Eddie Joost's "screwball single" and their record five errors which blew the All-Star game but in the final analysis what actually broke their hearts and the game wide open was baseball's big guy. That's right—Old Joltin' Joe DiMaggio. They call Joe, if you will forgive factual reporting, by the descriptive title of "Big Dago" around the ball parks. There's nothing disrespectful or racial involved. When ball players say it, it sounds like an accolade. It is. This is the guy who is the game's one real "pro." They say of a lot of them that they are ball players' ballplayers. There really is only one, the hawk-faced Italian guy from San Francisco whose every move spells class in capital letters. Big Joe got two for four yesterday as the American leaguers again belted over the National leaguers, 11 to 7. One was a double and he knocked in three runs. Actually they are cold figures which do callous injustice to a very warm tale. The Americans were in front by a slim 6 to 5 margin when the rangy clipper stepped up in the sixth. Two of his mates were aboard and he rammed them home with a sizzling liner which bounced recklessly against the center field wall. When it was ended, those were the winning runs in a rather drab, listless ball game marred by a fall of rain, errors and National league apathy.
