Bids Asked on OCE Power Plan

Bids for the construction of a light and power distribution system to serve the Oregon College of Education at Monmouth will be received at the administration building of the college until 10 o'clock August 18, it is announced by Charles D. Byrne, secretary of the Oregon state board of higher education. Three alternate plans are to be considered.

The first two plans include construction of a 550-kva substation of concrete block with brick veneer, each to have about 500 feet of five-volt underground high voltage cable to the substation where voltage will be stepped down. Both would be three-phase.

Under both plans voltage would be stepped down further to service voltage at individual buildings; through dry-type transformers.

The third plan would eliminate the substation and distribute power to three load centers at 12,470 volts. Voltage would then be stepped down through dry-type transformers directly to service voltage. This plan would require more underground high voltage cable, the installation needing approximately 5500 feet compared with about 1500 feet for either of the other two plans. In addition some switch gear will be required for distribution centers.

I'll Be at Air Show Sunday—"Klondike Kate," now Mrs. William Van Duren and residing near Jefferson, will still attend the Lebanon air show despite having to undergo surgery earlier this week, she said Thursday before leaving Salem Memorial hospital. Picture here with "Klondike Kate" is Miss Evelyn Whitmaker (left) of the state board of aeronautics office, who plans to fly Mrs. Van Duren to the show.

Takes More Than Surgery To Floor Klondike Kate

It will take more than mere surgery to keep "Klondike Kate," who in private life is Mrs. William Van Duren, away from Lebanon's air show Sunday. "They're planning on me and I'll not disappoint them," said the little lady as she lay in her hospital bed at the Salem Memorial hospital, where she underwent surgery Monday.

Used to the rugged life of Alaska, she was there in gold rush days and was at White Horse the day the railroad went through—Kate Rockwell Van Duren even though she left the hospital only Thursday afternoon sees no reason to miss the Sunday event at the Lebanon airport. She still plans on being flown in by Evelyn Whitmaker of the state board of aeronautics office.

Living in a new home near Jefferson since March of this year, "Klondike Kate" and her husband came to this section of Oregon sometime after she had returned from her last trip to Alaska, which was last fall.

Still enthusiastic about the Alaskan country Mrs. Van Duren thinks it is a place that no one should miss visiting and herself has gone back many times. Since 1933 she has made three trips on the same boat, "The Louise." What's more the same cabin boy has been on that boat ever since she made the first trip, she recalls.

Mention of the novelist Rex Beach, now seriously ill, was the occasion for a few memories by Mrs. Van Duren, who was a character in some of his novels. She recalled the last time she saw him was eight years or more ago, when she was at Dawson. The author, then visiting at Juneau and a guest of the governor, sent word for her to wait for him when the boat arrived. She has heard from him since but that was their last meeting.

Color in All Events Will Add Interest in Legion Meet

You've got to give the Legion credit. They don't do anything half way. A kaleidoscope of color and sound will unfold in Salem during the 31st annual convention of the American Legion Department of Oregon next week. The general public will have plenty of opportunity to witness a grand array of colorful events.

Among the most colorful will be the drum and bugle corps contest on Sweetland field Thursday night and the grand convention parade Friday afternoon. Flag-raising ceremonies on the courthouse lawn will be both bright and serious. And the world-famous "Blue Angels," a navy aerobatic team, will spread color all over the sky in their show at the airport Friday.

New Drum and Bugle 7 unique Always colorful and somewhat noisy, this year's drum and bugle corps contest will be augmented by a number of special features. The official department band from Musicians' port in Portland will offer a serenade and the gay Kilty band from Ashland will render a bagpipe march.

Hillsboro's auxiliary drill team will show off their Arabian Nights theme with members dressed as members of a Harem under the rule of a Rajah drillmaster. The "Spirit of '76" will be personified by three members of Portland's Federal post.

The competition itself will see Oregon's highest-quality drill teams in action. The defending champion corps from La Grande will be on hand in an attempt to defend its crown against a determined group of challengers. A large crowd is anticipated for the contest, which will be open to the public.

Two thousand uniformed military men, plus civilian bands, floats, etc., will comprise the grand parade, always a highlight of any Legion convention. Big Entry From Guard Over 600 National Guardsmen from the Willamette valley will assemble for the march, as will military groups from several Northwest stations. Drum and

Chemeketans to Leave for Camp

The Chemeketans, Salem outdoor organization, will leave on Saturday for their annual two weeks outing to be spent at Scott Lake, located a short distance off the McKenzie highway near the summit of the Cascades.

Harold V. Melchert who has had charge of preliminary work for the outing, expects an average of 19 Chemeketans will be in camp during the two week period. The group will be swelled considerably for the August 6-7 week-end when an ascent of the Middle Sister will be made.

Camp will be established along the northwest shore of the lake where an excellent view of the Sisters may be had. After camp has been established Robert Beercoft, recently named camp governor, will take over and direct the daily programs of hiking, fishing, picture taking or mountain climbing.

Burt Cray, chief for most of the annual outings, will be responsible for the meals. Chemeketans express the hope that huckleberries can be located in the vicinity of Scott Lake for huckleberry hotcakes is a Cray delicacy that eliminates the need for an alarm clock to get the hikers out of their sleeping bags.

"Just what the Scott Lake camp will be noted for is something to anticipate," said Melchert. "However, something will bob up. It was bear in the Teton one year, fog and wild flowers at Ranier and dust and heavy trail traffic in the Wallows where we expected solitude."

The camp and its environs will provide a wide variety of activities, including trail hiking, mountain climbing, fishing and just plain, ordinary loafing.

Borgen Accepts Call To Silverton Church

Silverton, July 29—Rev. Luther Borgen, Lutheran missionary now in Salem, last night accepted a call to the pastorate of the Trinity Lutheran church here.

Rev. Borgen succeeds Rev. M. J. K. Fuhr, recently resigned, who is moving to Arlington, Wash., where he will have a pastorate September 1.

Final action upon the call issued by a special committee will have to be taken by the entire congregation but Rev. Borgen is expected to be in the pulpit for several months before the vote is taken.

Back to Germany—Pictured at his desk when he was in Germany with the army is Lt. Farley Mogan of the Oregon state police, who Saturday leaves Salem to return to Germany for 60 days of duty as a civilian under special assignment to the secretary of army. Mogan, on military leave from the state police, will reorganize the German police department under the joint command.

Mogan Returns to Germany For 60-Day Tour of Duty

Two years ago this August Lt. Farley Mogan of the state police left Germany to return to Salem and rejoin the Oregon state police. Saturday the state police officer, a lieutenant to Capt. Ray Howard at District No. 2, leaves on the first lap of a trip that will take him back to duty in Germany, this time as a civilian and for only 60 days.

Mogan, who as chief of public safety on the army's general staff under Maj. Gen. Lucius Clay, had charge of the German civil police in the U. S. zone and organized the police department now operating in Germany. When he returns to Germany his specific duty will be that of reorganizing the new police department under the joint commands.

On special assignment to the secretary of the army, Lt. Mogan's orders assign him to the police and technique board of the bi-party control office for Germany. He is one of a group of educational and civic leaders to serve in the occupied zone in an advisory capacity and before leaving for Germany will spend time consulting with army officials on his assignment.

Mogan, who after four years with the army retired as a lieutenant colonel, is on military leave from the state police. His family will remain here during his absence.

Mogan will leave Portland by plane Saturday for Washington and after his brief stay in the nation's capital is to fly to Europe, arriving there next Wednesday. In Germany he will work out of Berlin and Frankfurt.

House Sought

One of the men said slum-clearance housing wasn't necessary in Salem because the closest the city had to a "slum" section was the veterans' housing colony in the southeastern part of the city. The colony houses 172 veterans families.

Meeting with Elliott were Mayor Robert Elstrom, James R. Beard, chairman of the Salem Retail Trade Bureau; John Adlon, Earl Heider and Ralph Schlesinger, trade bureau directors; Burt Picha, Salem Board of Realtors president; and Clay Cochran, Chamber of Commerce manager.
