Indian-Made Articles Will Be Exhibited in Bank Lobby

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Schlegeter, 510 North 24th, have an outstanding display of Indian-made articles, and have been invited to display them in the lobby of the Salem Branch of the First National Bank of Portland.

Among the articles is a model house, built by Julius Charles of the Lumbee reservation, modeled, to his best recollection, after the one he was most familiar with as a young man. Julius is now in his 90s.

When questioned about the very small opening for a door Julius explained:

"Had to step over like a log, then bend way down to get in. Bears smell salmon in house. Can't come in. Hole too small."

There were no windows in the long house, which was large enough to accommodate 50 or 60 families. The opening in the roof let in light while letting out the smoke from the cooking fires indoors. The rains of the South country are gentle though continuous, and seldom were the openings closed. But the Indian was prepared. He had an adjustable slab of cedar near the opening which could be moved into place by a long pole from the inside.

Old masks used by the tribesmen in celebrations of by-gone days were repainted and hollowed out with modern tools as recently as 1937. These will be on display during the week of August 7.

The following week of August 14 cedar root baskets will be exhibited. These are works of art and served the Indians in many ways. The baby's bed was a cedar root basket, also the cooking, drying and berry baskets.

They were timber Indians who used wood for many things, even clothing and blankets. The blankets were of cedar bark, in-jutable slab of cedar near the

Cohen Assigned To Portland

State Tax Commissioner Ray Smith today announced the appointment of Nate Cohen, on the commission's legal staff, to be manager of the Portland office of the state income tax division. Smith is tax commissioner in charge of the income tax division.

Cohen will succeed Carl Armstrong, who is resigning Sept. 1 to accept a post with the U.S. National Bank of Portland.

Cohen was originally assigned as legal adviser to the tax commission by Attorney General George Neuner, Smith said.

and duck feathers.

"We enjoy telling about our Puget Sound Indian friends," say Mr. and Mrs. Schlegeter. "Should your eastern visitors wish to know about these Indians who were so different, we will gladly show them our complete exhibit any afternoon after the month of August."

he had wanted for some time to have a member of the commission's legal staff in the Portland office, and the appointment of Cohen would give the Portland office a manager who at the same time is versed in legal aspects of the income tax division.

Street Vacation Will Add to Campus

Monmouth—The city council of Monmouth have adopted a resolution initiating proceedings to vacate north Whitman street from the north line of Jackson street to the south line of Church street, and north College street from the north line of Jackson street to the north end of College street.

The council has decided that the streets will be of greater benefit for use as part of the campus of the Oregon College of Education than for street purposes. The council has fixed September 6, as a date for final hearings at City hall.

Rural Readers Must Pay Annual Charge

Woodburn—The Woodburn free library is free only to those residing within the city limits and Mrs. Estella Kerns, librarian, wishes to make it plain that there is a charge of $1 a family to those living outside the city. This charge of $1 makes it possible for an entire family of residents outside the city to enjoy the privileges of the library for a whole year. Some misunderstanding of this rule makes embarrassment for the librarian who desires to have a clear understanding by those concerned.

Development of Columbia River Basin Urged by Gray

Washington, Aug. 2 (AP)—National security demands prompt development of the Columbia river basin, Secretary of the Army Gray said today.

He told a house committee that how it's done—through creation of a Columbia Valley Administration or some other way—is for congress to decide. He said he did not believe that creation of a CVA was the only way the basin can be developed.

But for himself, he added, he felt that the CVA was the best approach.

Under any circumstance, he went on, "I urge that without delay and for the interest of national security this great program to develop the Pacific Northwest go forward."

Testifying before the public works committee, which is considering a bill to set up a CVA, Gray said the army long has been seriously concerned with the need for full development of the river basin, and added:

"It is essential to national defense that the hydroelectric potential of the Columbia river and its tributaries be fully realized and developed as soon as practicable. The power of the Columbia is needed for aluminum production and for atomic production."

He said the growing industries of the Portland, Ore., region and of other cities require effective flood control and that the river's navigation possibilities must be expanded.

He praised the work of the army engineers and the reclamation bureau in the basin but said their plans are not a substitute for CVA.

"The need remains for an economical and efficient administration mechanism, such as the CVA," he said, "for carrying out these plans, after they are approved by congress."

Under questioning, Gray said he would be opposed to stripping the army engineers of their civilian functions and that he did not believe military personnel could be assigned to aid the CVA.

Polio Cases on Upgrade in U. S.

(By the Associated Press)

Infantile paralysis cases showed a sharp increase in some states in the last year, boosting the nation's total far ahead of 1948, a near record year.

The number of polio deaths for the first seven months of 1949, an Associated Press survey showed, is about double the total up to Aug. 1, 1948.

The survey showed approximately 3,000 cases and 442 deaths. However, data on fatalities was sketchy and incomplete in some states on the number of cases.

The 27,080 polio cases reported in 1948 were the second highest of record but up to Aug. 1, 1948, the total was under 5,000. The worst polio year was 1916 when about 30,000 cases were reported.

Increases in the number of cases over last week's figures were reported in New York, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The 1,123 cases in Texas did not include the number stricken in the last week in July.

Mrs. Boettiger Wins Divorce

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 2 (AP)—Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, daughter of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, was granted a divorce Monday from John Boettiger.

Judge Renz L. Jennings of the superior court here granted the divorce in proceedings which lasted less than 15 minutes.

Mrs. Boettiger, 43, appeared at the judge's chambers with her attorney, Boettiger, 49, was not present.

He had filed for divorce charging mental cruelty. Mrs. Boettiger, in a cross-complaint, stated Boettiger deserted her more than a year ago. He did not answer the cross-complaint.

A property settlement had previously been made.

Mrs. Boettiger obtained custody of a son, John, 10, and $100 per month for his support. She had made no request for alimony.

She has two other children by a previous marriage to Curtis Dall, New York broker.

Boettiger is now a vice-president of Theodor Swanson & Co., public relations firm.

The Boettigers were married in 1935. He was reported for the Chicago Tribune. Later he became publisher of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

After the war, the two published the Arizona Times, an afternoon daily newspaper which they started here. They sold their interests last year.

Mrs. Boettiger said she would go to Portland, Ore., this week but the exact time "depends on the stork." Her daughter, Mrs. Van H. Seagraves, is expecting the birth of a child.

Albany Man Injured Unloading Melons

Lebanon, Aug. 2—Jay Hulet, 23, of Albany, was injured early Monday unloading a large truck and trailer of produce at the Safeway store on east Ash street.

A crib of watermelons, slid from the truck pinning Hulet against the wall of the building. Unable to extricate himself, he tried to attract attention to his plight for almost two hours before early passers-by heard his cries and rescued him.

He was taken to the Lebanon Community hospital where surgery was required for his injured right leg and knee.

Farm Fire Alarms

Monmouth, Aug. 2—The Monmouth rural fire department was called Sunday afternoon to the A. F. Elkins and sons farm, located seven miles south of Monmouth, when a brush fire was thought to be getting out of control. The fire department arrived in time and no damage was done.

The site of Oklahoma City was opened for settlement at noon, April 22, 1889, and by night it had a population of 10,000 living in tents, according to the Encyclopedia Britannica.
