

Bulb Gardens Hearing Ends

The state agriculture department's two-day hearing about the Sherwood bulb gardens ended last night, and the department's order is expected in a few weeks.

The department charged the gardens—one of the northwest's biggest bulb sellers—with fraud, deception and misrepresentation and ordered the hearing of L. E. Marcus, owner of the gardens, could defend himself. The department wants to refuse to renew his nursery license.

Marcus testified last night that when the department ordered the hearing, his business shrank so much that it caused him serious financial difficulties.

But on cross-examination, he admitted he had been in financial deep water before the hearing was ordered.

Marcus said he had conferred with a referee in bankruptcy, but he denied he had been under pressure from his creditors.

The final section "Monmouth Campus" brought the picture up to date showing modern day school children enjoying a modern recreational program.

Ask for Details On 5 Percenters

Washington, Aug. 3 (AP)—A house armed services subcommittee voted today to ask army secretary Gordon Gray for information on any five percenters who may have been connected with the military uniform business.

Rep. Hebert (D-La.) told reporters Gray will be heard tomorrow behind closed doors.

Stanley J. Cummings, executive secretary of the National Association of Uniform Manufacturers, Inc., was due to testify today. Hebert said the subcommittee has been unable to get in touch with him.

Cummings is on a vacation, Hebert said, and is not expected back at his Brooklyn, N. Y., home until Aug. 15. The subcommittee will decide after talking to Gray whether it then wants to question Cummings.

Hebert said Cummings told him personally three weeks ago of having been approached by James V. Hunt, a former army quartermaster colonel, in connection with a pending army order relating to the manufacture of officers' uniforms.

Over 1500 More Needed in Beans

Recent hot weather has brought on the bean crop faster than expected with the result that several western Oregon areas suddenly are reporting shortages of pickers to the Oregon state employment service.

More than 1,500 additional workers can find work in the bean fields during the peak period between now and August 20, the employment service says. Main shortages reported are from the Albany local office, where 750 more pickers can be used, and from Salem, which has put in call for 600 additional persons.

Eugene and Hillsboro offices also need a hundred or more workers, while McMinnville, Oregon City and Portland reported a close balance between the supply and demand.

All prospective pickers should have their own camping and cooking equipment, but some accommodations are available on farms. Bean harvest will last well into September in some sections, but the main part of the crop will be gathered this month.

This is the first farm labor shortage reported in Oregon since the cherries and berries were picked late in June.

Speakers at the institute will include officials of the state department of education, blind school teachers, and several from blind schools of other states.

Disease Still Serious Menace

Many farmers may be acquiring a false sense of security over the threat of Newcastle disease to their poultry flocks, veterinary authorities say.

"This disease has now spread to every state in the Union, and although there is less talk about it today than there was several years ago, the losses it causes are very heavy," the American Foundation for Animal Health reports. "Newcastle disease is second only to pullorum disease in the economic loss it now causes the poultry industry."

Vaccines recently developed through veterinary research are proving helpful in controlling the disease, the Foundation said, but vaccination should be considered as an aid to, not a substitute for, strict control measures. If Newcastle disease appears in a flock, all dead birds should be burned or buried, and susceptible birds should not be brought to the farm until four weeks or more after the outbreak. Farmers should also take precautions to be sure birds are obtained from sources free of the disease.

"If a flock-owner lives in an area where Newcastle disease has not yet become a serious problem, he should undertake vaccination only on the advice of his veterinarian," the Foundation said.

Idaho, Saturday noon at Pocatello, Saturday evening at Idaho Falls and later the same evening will address a general meeting at the same place.

Tunis W. Creech, Druggist, Dies

Salem relatives Tuesday night received word of the death of a hospital in Detroit, Michigan, that day of Tunis W. Creech, 68, retired Salem druggist. Creech, who with Mrs. Creech had been visiting in Michigan, died from a cerebral hemorrhage, suffered two weeks ago.

Creech for many years before his retirement operated the Creech Pharmacy at State and 12th streets. He and Mrs. Creech left Salem in April for an extended trip that took them to the east coast and were to have left Detroit for Salem the day before he was stricken with the cerebral hemorrhage. He was born at Pine River, Mich., November 21, 1880, and October 29, 1906, was married to Eula Shear at Muskegon, Mich. The Creechs came to Salem in 1913.

Two children preceded Mr. Creech in death. A son, John was killed in a plane crash in Ethiopia in 1947, while serving with the U.S. army as a paratrooper, and a daughter, Julia, died in 1931.

Surviving besides his wife are two brothers, Warren Creech of Salem and Fred Creech of Alma, Mich.; and several nieces and nephews, including Mrs. Inabelle Walker and Mrs. Ila Mae Raetz, both of Salem.

Announcement of services will be made later by the Clough-Barrick chapel.

Blood Program Told To Miller Staff

The blood program of the American Red Cross and how the public may assist it was discussed by Miss Susan Faherty, manager of Marion county chapter of the Red Cross, Wednesday morning for the staff of the Miller Mercantile company store.

The store management invited all the staff to a 9 o'clock coffee at the cafeteria, coffee and rolls being served, with Miss Faherty as guest.

While the blood program is a voluntary matter the store management states it is encouraging staff members to become donors and has donor cards available at the office.

Nab Mexican Jail Breakers

Morelia, Mexico, Aug. 3 (AP)—Most of the 72 prisoners battling police in a mass jail break surrendered early today after an all-night siege.

Six prisoners were killed in the fighting and eight captured, police headquarters said. One policeman was reported dead and two wounded.

The escaped prisoners, armed with rifles, sidearms and other weapons from the jail, were surrounded on a small hill outside the city. Police dug in around the hill for an all-night battle. The prisoners broke out of jail shortly before nightfall. They made a concerted rush on guards and overwhelmed them. They ransacked the jail for weapons before fleeing, and are believed to have at least rifles and quantities of ammunition. Six of the prisoners are listed as "dangerous convicts."

Police, reinforced by troops from the local garrison, overtook the band of jail breakers at the city's outskirts and forced them to take up a defense position on the hill.
