Motor folds forward into the plane's body after ship gains enough altitude to soar. Ted Nelson of Oakland, Calif., builder of the plane is at controls. (AP Wirephoto)

Capital Zone Extension Sought by State Board

Extension of Salem's capitol zone and approval of the projected state highway department building on Summer street, were the main recommendations made by the new capitol zoning commission at its first meeting Wednesday.

The new commission, authorized by the 1949 legislature, will continue to make studies for improvement of the capitol zone, Robert W. Sawyer, chairman of the commission, said.

Praise Resounds For Vapor Lights

Favorable comment was heard Wednesday night and Thursday about the newly-installed mercury-vapor lights in the city center.

The highest level of illumination on the Pacific coast is what Fred G. Starrett, Willamette valley manager for the Portland General Electric, says about them.

The 78 new lights, on their tall standards with two lamps at the top of each, were turned on by Mayor Robert L. Elfstrom with the city council looking on.

The lights have a peculiarity that at first isn't understood. They do not lunge into complete illumination at once with the turning of the switch. They have to heat-up, and it may be as much as 22 minutes before they are at their best.

Several other valley cities have mercury-vapor lights, but none of the high illumination level of the new ones here.

The lights have been installed on Commercial downtown and on the cross streets between Commercial and Liberty. Next year the city hopes to have them installed on Liberty, and then later on High street.

The installation was by City Electric, and it was financed by the PGE company. The city will pay for maintenance and use.

Brannan Plan Fight Goes On

The fight for the Brannan farm plan will carry on, despite its setback in congress, President Ronald E. Jones of the Oregon Farmers union, said Tuesday on his return from Salt Lake City.

Jones attended a meeting of the executive committee of the National Farmers union.

Jones also announced that President James G. Patton will be the principal speaker at the annual picnic of the Oregon Farmers union at Champoeng Sunday, August 21. Patton will speak on "Agriculture in Transition."

"The Brannan plan is not dead," President Jones said. "This needs to be pointed out in view of the attempts of much of the press and many commentators to give such an impression."

"Only one phase of a continuing battle for its adoption has been completed."

"What congress has done is to continue the old plan of guaranteed profits which insures eventual elimination of working farmers. This is no answer to the farm problem . . ."

"The country wants and needs a program which will promote both producer and consumer interests and which recognizes their complementary interests. Again the Brannan plan pattern provides the answer."

"The American people will never be satisfied with the present ill conceived and inadequate programs. The Farmers union renews its pledge to continue the fight for a plan so right in principle."

Tanana Waters Recede

Fairbanks, Alaska, Aug. 4 (AP)—Receding waters of the Tanana river appeared today to have ended the immediate threat of floods in the central Alaska town of Nenana.

NOTICE

Both shortening and cheese are due for an advance in price; as a matter of fact, the price advanced 3c per pound on cheese August the first. However, as always you'll save that three cents as long as our present stock lasts.

One look at our 3-deck refrigerated cheese case, with over 40 varieties to choose from, will convince you that cheese really sells fast. The value is there, that's the reason.

MEAT DEPARTMENT

At first glance, one might think our prices were high, and as a matter of fact the per pound price is higher than the run-of-the-mill price. BUT, for real satisfaction, real value, for meat you'll enjoy, trimmed just right, aged to the proper degree . . . well, we claim—and we're ready to back it up—you get your money's worth in quality plus . . . guaranteed . . . no exception. Quite a statement, eh? One trial and you, too, will agree nothing can beat the best.

VEGETABLE DEPARTMENT

We're all going overboard to make this the most pleasant shopping spot in the entire Northwest! We'll not go into detail, as to do so would sound too much like bragging, and you know us . . . perish the thought! Some of our own eyes bug out when we look at this beautiful display of the finest eating vegetables in the world. Hold everything, maybe that's bragging. Wait until you see for yourself!

BAKERY DEPARTMENT

Fresh from the oven daily . . . cakes, cookies, pies and an assortment of fresh-made bread. And, of course, Downy Flakes hot off the griddle for 29c per doz. (Downy Flake Donuts, that is.)
