

'Kiddieland' to Be Fair Feature

Work will be completed this week on the Oregon State Fair's "Kiddieland," the last major construction at the exposition plant before the fair opens Sept. 5.

A large area adjacent to the horseshow pavilion has been set aside as a juvenile area and a number of amusement innovations already have been installed. The entrances and ticket booths will be painted with nursery rhyme characters and the entire area will be surrounded by a picket fence.

The toy train, long a fair standby for the younger gentry, as been rerouted and will include a tunnel and trestle. Large awning-covered benches will be scattered throughout "Kiddieland" for weary parents. All amusement rides within "Kiddieland" will be designed for children 10 and under and will operate at lower admission prices.

Bank Employees Overpower Gunman

Coulee City, Wash., Aug. 4 (AP)—An unidentified gunman, who attempted to hold up The First National Bank of Commerce here, today was in the Columbia Basin hospital at Ephrata, Wash., under armed guard after being knocked out with a portable iron safe handle.

Sheriff George Andrus said the bandit was overpowered by three employees when he demanded that the safe be opened last night.

Entering through a window while employees were closing the day's books, he attempted to force Urban Schmitt, the bank's manager, to open the safe, Andrus said.

"This Schmitt could not do, because of a time lock," the sheriff said.

Polio Increases In Washington

Medical forces rallied their strength today in the fight against polio as the crippling disease made new inroads throughout Washington state.

An 11-year-old Chewelah schoolboy, Billy Offerdahl, died yesterday in a Spokane hospital. He was the third victim there since July 1. Seven other persons were isolated.

And at Everett the number of hospitalized cases increased to 10 as doctors diagnosed the ailment of 16-month-old Stephen Eadie, son of Mrs. I. M. Eadie.

H. L. McMartin, Snohomish county health officer, said the situation was "serious but not approaching an epidemic."
