

Mercy Mission Repeated With Same Situation

Port Angeles, Wash., Aug. 18 (AP)—In a unique case of history repeating itself on a mercy mission, the same coast guard PBV plane was en route to pick up a sick civilian who was stricken just one week ago on the same boat in the same position off the coast of Washington.

The ailing man is John Carobela, ex-navy hospital corpsman. His symptoms were given in a radio message from the fishing vessel Invincible as suffering pains in the back of the head, chills, rapid pulse, swollen eyelids and stomach pains.

Carobela diagnosed his trouble as food poisoning. But the skipper of the 63-foot Invincible radioed he believed Carobela was having a relapse after being treated last week for a bad head gash.

Last Wednesday the PBV took Carobela to Boeing field where he was put in an ambulance and rushed to Marine hospital in Seattle.

Home port of the Invincible is Tacoma. Its owner is Paul S. Babich.

Carobela was stricken while his boat was in the identical location it was when he took ill last week—off Cattle Point in the San Juan Islands.
