School Buses to Have Stop Signals

The secretary of state's office today termed Oregon school buses as stop signs on wheels, and called attention to the new law which requires motorists to stop when meeting or overtaking a bus which has halted along the highway.

One new thing has been added to the familiar yellow and black school buses: they are being equipped with stop signal arms which will flip out as they slow down to stop.

799,416 Books In Libraries

Eugene, Aug. 22—In its seven libraries, the State System of Higher Education now has 799,416 volumes, valued at $2,275,104.89, according to a report made this month by William H. Carlson, director of libraries, to Chancellor Paul C. Packer.
