

Red Conquests in China Called Catastrophe to U. S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—George F. Kennan, the state department's top policy planner, says communist conquests in China are a catastrophe which will make real peace in the far east impossible for a long time.

Meanwhile, he said, the United States must guard not only its own interests in the far east but "interests of international peace, as best we can."

He said the Chinese situation may call for "new approaches and techniques." But he gave no indication the administration plans to change in the near future from its "wait and see" policy.

Kennan and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson discussed national defense Monday night over the Columbia Broadcasting system.

Kennan said an attack of "unprecedented cynicism and intensity" is being waged against the peace and happiness of peoples throughout the world.

He said the sharpest edge of the attack is being directed against the United States because it is the bulwark of the free world.

He said that the assailant, obviously Russia, knew that "our own self-confidence, and the confidence of others in us, must be broken before it would be safe to attack the free world anywhere."

Johnson said that building up the military strength of western Europe should make the United States invincible but that "their facilities, were they to fall into enemy hands, would make that enemy hard to beat."

Circus Warfare Brings Cut Prices

Devils Lake, N. D., Aug. 24 (AP)—A "press agent" was blamed today for the "circus war" between Ringling Bros. and Cole Bros. circuses.

Arthur Concello, general manager for Ringling, said the whole situation can be chalked up to this guy who handles publicity for Cole Bros., because he worked for Baley Bros. Circus last year and did the same thing with them.

Cole Bros. yesterday cut its prices 50 per cent at Seattle, Wash., as its latest blow in the fight with Ringling. Cole invaded Ringling's territory this year, moving over the route ahead of the "Big Show."

Ringling retaliated with a "paper war," urging customers to "wait for the big show." Concello said "Ringling pays no attention to other circuses. We don't care what Cole Bros. does."

LONG SNOOT ACTED AS POINTER

Barney, the Pig, No Longer To Act as a Hunting Dog

Portland, Ind. (AP)—Farmer Jack Hough said today he has had to quit using his talented pig, Barney, as a hunting dog.

"But he's just as good as a saddle horse," Hough said. "My son rides him around the yard all the time."

Barney, a Hampshire, learned to hunt last November when he followed Hough and Nig, a setter, while they were out scaring up game. Barney caught on easily, Hough said.

"At first Barney watched," Hough said. "Then he started pushing rabbits out of bushes. Pretty soon he was pointing."

After that, Barney would "freeze and point" or flush out game if he halted to see it soon enough, Hough said.

Hough gladly displays Barney's talents for any disbelievers.

He said he had to stop taking the porker on hunting trips because it can't get through fences the way it did when it was a 60-pound piglet.

"Barney is almost a year old, he weighs more than 320 pounds now and he's slowed up," Hough said. "But he picked up pointing faster than any dog I've ever seen. It just seemed natural to him. In some ways he was better than a dog because he never ran off, but worked close in."

Furthermore, Hough said, Barney's curly tail was no handicap to his talent as a pointer. "He has a pretty long snout, which was better."

Hough's 8-year-old son, Jackie, broke Barney to the saddle, one Hough made especially for the pig.
