

'Big Name' Teams Dot Grid Slates of Northwest Crews

By LOYD BULMUR
Seattle, Sept. 11 (AP)—Pacific northwest football teams have certainly followed the lead of the University of Washington in bringing "big-name" schools into their football schedules.

This year alone, the three northwest members of the Pacific coast conference, Washington, Washington State and Idaho, will face inter-sectional competition ranked among the best and toughest in the country.

Idaho, for years languishing in the PCC cellar, will journey to Austin, Tex., October 1 to meet the Longhorns of the University of Texas. Washington beards Notre Dame at Seattle, plays Minnesota at the Gophers' home stadium and also faces Utah. Washington State takes on Utah State.

And the prospect for more "top-drawer" competition in succeeding years is bright.

Washington has a home-and-home series scheduled with Illinois, while Washington State signed up Oklahoma A. & M. for a twin-bill. Last year the Cougars met Penn State, losing by only a slight margin.

The University of Montana, acknowledged "weak-sister" of the PCC, has a number of intersectional battles. South Dakota, Utah State, Colorado A. & M. and Brigham Young all appear on the 1949 Grizzly schedule.

The rest of the Pacific coast conference teams also have some hefty opposition approaching. Southern California takes on Notre Dame and Ohio State. UCLA and Oregon both meet Iowa. California invades Wisconsin; Stanford plays Harvard and Michigan and Oregon State takes on Michigan State.

Northwest schools are using the inter-sectional games for a twin purpose. First, to draw larger crowds. Second, to prove to the rest of the nation that despite poor showings in the last three Rose Bowl games, the Pacific coast can produce teams comparable with the rest of the country.

The "little" schools of the Pacific northwest haven't been backward about contacting inter-sectional opposition. But with a smaller budget, the range is limited.

Nevertheless, Evergreen conference teams this year will play a total of 15 squads outside the conference.

Horse Is Breeding With Breathing Aid

By DICK ANDERSON

Henderson, Ky.—Ballwee is a three-year-old gelding short on wind but long on courage.

The Balladier-Willowee thoroughbred races with a silver plated brass trachea tube in his throat. And he's hard to beat on the track.

After two operations to improve his wind, Trainer Harry Richards of Lexington, Ky., obtained the tube from Ireland, his former home. The operation involved the removal of two or three cartilages in the horse's windpipe for the insertion of the tube.

The gadget fits through an opening in the windpipe. It is like a T-joint in a plumbing fixture. The T portion of the pipe extends up and down in the windpipe with the base of the T coming through the opening in the neck where it is fitted with a round metal plate. The plate has a shutter that can be closed when the horse isn't exercising or racing.

To date Ballwee has raced four times and shows one victory, a second and a third. His only time out of money was at Riverdowns near Cincinnati when it is believed that rain interfered with his breathing.

Trainer Richards is very careful about conditions when he enters his charge. A muddy track could cause trouble if a clump of mud were to be thrown against the windpipe opening. He avoids racing the gelding on humid or rainy days.

The gelding was purchased at the Lexington Sales by Judge F. V. Barbour.

"The horse has considerable promise," says Richards. "The tube is removed daily for sterilization. At night, or when the horse is resting the tube is closed and he breathes normally."

Ballwee has been campaigning at Dade Park in Henderson.

He doesn't want any favors, just a chance like the rest of the boys. In high school, Bob was the starting center for his final three years. (Acme Telephoto.)

CUT TO RIBBONS

Angel Watches His Dream Slashed

By OSCAR FRALEY

New York, Sept. 13 (AP)—Angel Lopez, a dapper little man with a passion for prize fighters and rumba music, was "awful upset" today at the manner in which a Harlem knife fight almost cut his championship dream to ribbons.

Lopez is the self-admitted "hot sports" who can blow a five-figure wad on a horse race or a leather pushing contest without a quiver of his tiny black moustache.

But the suave night club owner who has "much money" was an amateur boxer in his hectic youth, the days when he came to the United States from Spain and set out to found his rhythmic fortune. So always he admired the champions and, when he finally admitted to himself that he never would be a fistie champ, Lopez built himself a shining dream of some day managing one.

It was a long-delayed vision. But as Angel's bankroll increased, so did his prospects. He bought the contracts of one fighter after another.

Finally he thought he had a lad who would make the grade, a puncher named Jose Basora. But in 1945, Jose folder up in the late going against Ray Robinson—and the disgusted Lopez peddled him off quickly.

Then came a youngster out of Camaguary, Cuba, who seemed like a sure shot. His name was Gerardo Gonzalez and they called him "Kid Gavilan."

Gerardo, it seemed, had been discovered by a manager named Fernando Balido. The latter ran a candy shop called "El Gavilan." So Gerardo was named after the candy store—and he was a real sweet swinger.

Not only that, but he could rumba like a professional dancer. That sold Lopez, and he bought the "keed's" contract. "El Gavilan" in Spanish means "The Hawk" and the "keed" fought like one. Soon they were calling him the best thing to come out of Cuba since Kid Chocolate invaded the United States in 1928.

So it appeared, finally, as if Lopez would realize his long-time dream and come up with a champion. They got their shot last July against Robinson but Gavilan lost the decision. Still, there was a chance.

for Robinson is ready to vacate the welterweight crown and Gavilan looked like the best possible successor.

Much of it depended on the Jake Lamotta-Marcel Cerdan middleweight title fight Sept. 28. If Lamotta wins, he will defend against Robinson. That meant he would abandon the welter title and leave it to be fought for by Gavilan and Charley Fusari.

The "Keed's" chances would

Vikings Receive Uniforms, Polish For Friday Start

Uniforms were issued to the Salep high school football team Monday afternoon as Coach Loren Mort prepared to put the final polish on the team for the opener Friday night in Kiggins bowl at Vancouver, Wash.

Despite improved action on the part of the Viking crew in virtually every department, the Salems face a stiff test when they meet the Trappers.

Coach Roy Sandberg, while hampered by a lack of experienced linemen on the Vancouver be better than even to finally make Angel's dream come true.

But early Sunday morning Gavilan was stashed on the neck when he became involved in a Harlem street argument. He escaped with five stitches in his neck.

"I should be ver-ee hap-ee," Lopez said as he considered the slight damage. "But when I think how close keed came to maybe getting keeled, wal—I'm steel awful upset."

ver squad is reported to be toying with the idea of tossing a three-team platoon system at the Vikings.
