Larry Boulter Is Back at Elfstroms

Larry Boulter, Salem artist and former director of Elfstrom's Galleries again takes over the helm of the galleries and art department on Court street, Thursday.

R. L. Elfstrom expressed pleasure at the return of Boulter and made it known that many others have also been of the same opinion in respect of the artist's ability to promote art in the state of Oregon.

Boulter has devoted a greater share of his time to serious study of art since he left Elfstrom's last winter and will install a new phase in home planning, colors and design. Also from his experience as a teacher at the Lincoln county art center he has seen the benefits of sustained demonstrations in the technique of art which he plans to carry through the same procedure in the gallery in the near future.

He was enthused at the way a great number of coastal residents plunged into art under the guidance of Maude Wanker, even though the attendance in oil painting and watercolors was too big for individual attention.

"Nevertheless," stated Boulter, "a great amount of hidden talent came to the surface. Bankers, storekeepers, farmers, retired ranchers, housewives and entire families painted not with the desire to become artists but to explore through creating to find a better understanding and appreciation of things worthwhile."

Four were in Portland and three in Lincoln county. The others were scattered.

Baby Drowned In Millpond

Lebanon, Ore., Sept. 15—Dana Jensen, two-year-old son and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Jensen, 285 Fourth place, was found drowned in the millpond of the Fir Ridge Lumber company about 1 o'clock.

Hundreds of volunteers spent the fore part of the night in a district-wide search for the youngster who had been missing since late afternoon.

The search was directed by the police and fire departments with a public address system used throughout the city to call out searchers.

The organized search got under way about 7 o'clock in the evening.

Elmer Fitzgerald, chief of the fire department, took the initiative when Jensen, an automobile mechanic, learned that the boy was missing when he arrived home after work.

He was last seen playing in the yard but when a hired girl at the Jensen home went to call him to dinner he had disappeared.

Volunteer searchers were aided by members of swing-shift crews who joined after quitting work.

Automobiles were lined up for blocks around the housing project where the Jensen family lived. The area searched is bounded by the railroad tracks and two millponds, both of which were dragged.
