

Long, Bitter AFL Printing Strike in Chicago Collapses

Chicago, Sept. 15 (AP)—The nation's longest and bitterest protest against the Taft-Hartley law apparently collapsed today as an AFL Printers union agreed to end its strike against five Chicago newspapers, almost two years after the men walked out of the composing rooms.

The agreement, reached last night, will be submitted to a rank and file vote of the Chicago Typographical union next Sunday.

John J. Pilch, local president, said the terms were approved by Woodruff Randolph, international president, and that the printers would be advised to accept them.

"I feel very happy about the entire situation," Pilch said. The joint announcement by labor and management said that the printers would receive a $10 a week pay increase.

No mention was made of the working conditions provided by the new contract. The closed shop ban of the Taft-Hartley law was the core of the dispute.

Pilch said that "union protection is insured by several provisions" and added that unless the union thought the protection "sufficient and workable we would not recommend that this contract be accepted."

Under the terms of a recent New York settlement newspapers there agreed to hire only "qualified" printers and gave the union wide discretion in setting up the qualifications. A spokesman intimated that the settlement here followed this pattern.

During the long strike, Chicago readers almost forgot what a paper printed by normal methods looks like.

The 1,500 printers trooped off their jobs November 24, 1947, striking against the Chicago Sun, Times, Daily News, Journal of Commerce, Tribune and Herald-American.

The papers continued printing by using photo-engraving to replace the linotypists and typesetters. They reported circulation remaining about normal and advertising increased.

During the strike the Sun and Times combined into a 24-hour daily and the strike was given as one of the causes of the merger.

The wage loss to the printers was estimated at least $6,000,000. The union paid $40 a week to single men and $60 a week

Merchants Form Club in Keizer

H. P. Teets is temporary chairman and Mrs. Dorthee Teeter temporary secretary of a group of merchants organized to promote the interests of the Keizer community through a business men's club.

Another meeting will be held at the fire house Tuesday night when a proposed constitution and by-laws will be presented. Named to the committee to draft the regulations are Onas Olson, Louis Cross, Ben Brown and Edward Ferrell.

The purpose of the organization, Teets states, is to develop a more cooperative spirit among business houses by men who have been established here several years, and also to promote ways and means of better serving the community. All persons interested are invited to attend the next meeting.

Bullet-Proof Suits Developed for Army

San Pedro, Calif., Sept. 15 (AP)—The army may be returning to suits of armor.

Maj. Gen W. H. Middleswart of the quartermaster general's office disclosed yesterday the development of bullet-resistant body armor for soldiers—made of plastic and nylon.

The general said the cloth-like substance will resist a .45 caliber bullet fired from only 15 feet away. The material is nearly a quarter-inch thick.
