Its warmth and light are responsible for the growth of vegetation, our primary source of food. Its rays evaporate water, raise it into clouds and produce the winds that bring rain to us. All weather is the result of sunshine. Should Old Sol some time permanently "black out," life as we know it could not long exist. Despite appearances, the sun, according to Dr. Henzel, is not "on fire" in the sense of combustion. It is composed of intensely hot, luminous gases, hydrogen preluminous gases, hydrogen predominating. The visible solar
