The pound is not convertible into other currencies without a treasury permit and dollars may not be taken out of the country unless the treasury approves. The new, cheaper pound means that Americans may buy Scotch whiskey, English tweeds, Staffordshire china and many other British products at lower prices. By mid-day 2,000 stockbrokers and clerks jammed into the street in front of the stock exchange. They had an open air market, going especially in booming gold shares. In the confusion prices quoted in one knot of brokers often were as much as three shillings higher or lower than those 20 yards away. South African gold shares shot up over last Friday's official closing quotations. Randfontein Gold Mines jumped from 18 shillings to 25. The conservative Financial Times, which conceded that the pound has long been overvalued said the cut "is considerably greater than was needed."

Cripps' explanation was: "It was essential to fix the new rate at a level we could hold; we can always let the rate go up if events prove that we have gone down a bit too far."

Buffalo Bill's Family—Descendants and relatives of Buffalo Bill Cody gather at the Salem Chamber of Commerce for the annual Cody clan banquet Saturday night. Over 150 Codys met in Salem over the week-end for their family reunion, the first held on the Pacific coast since 1939.

Bill Cody Clansmen Headed East After 2-Day Reunion

Reversing a trend set by their famous ancestors in the days of the wild west, the Codys were heading east today. Descendants of Buffalo Bill Cody wound up their annual two-day reunion with a picnic at Paradise Island Sunday, and today were en route to their homes throughout the United States and southern Canada.

Of the 155 Cody clansmen in Salem for the family affair, the one who most vividly recalled Buffalo Bill was William Cody Boal, of Bellingham, Wash., a grandson of the famous William Cody.

Boal, who like dozens of his relatives has the middle name of Cody, lived and traveled with Col. Cody for many years. Boal refers to Buffalo Bill as "the Colonel." Other members of the clan call him Col. Cody. None of them ever refer to him by the more familiar name of Buffalo Bill.

When Boal was of pre-school age, both his parents died, so Boal moved to live with his grandfather. From then until Col. Cody died, Boal lived with him constantly and traveled with his wild west circus.

At Sunday's picnic, Boal told his relatives about "the Colonel." Boal said that Col. Cody was an easy-going, well-mannered, soft-spoken gentleman in private life, a direct contrast to the picture one may have formed of him in reading history books of his many colorful and thrilling exploits as an outdoorsman.

Boal, who was present when Col. Cody died, probably knew the famous American more intimately than anyone else. The descendants of Col. Cody organized in 1925, and have held an annual reunion every year since. The reunion just completed was the second ever held on the Pacific coast. The other was in Hanford, Calif., in 1939. Next year's gathering will be conducted in a Canadian city.

Harry Arthur Cody of Ripon, Wis., was elected honorary president of the Cody clan at a Saturday business meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, and R. Ernest Edwin Cody of Ann Arbor, Mich., was named president.

Following Saturday's business session the Cody party toured the capitol building, then held their annual banquet and entertainment program at the Chamber of Commerce.

A memorial service at the chamber topped Sunday morning's program, while the Paradise Island picnic (no buffalo meat served) concluded the reunion Sunday afternoon.

Frank Morgan, Film Star, Dies

Hollywood, Sept. 19 (AP)—The movie industry and fans throughout the nation today mourned the death of Frank Morgan, beloved comedian whose sly chuckle and skillful double-talk carried him through nearly four decades of fame.

Morgan died in his sleep at his Beverly Hills mansion yesterday. He was 59. A doctor said death apparently resulted from a heart attack. His wife of 35 years, Alma, found him dead when she awoke at noon.

"He just went to sleep and never woke up," said his business manager, Mrs. Margerite Cerry.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete. Morgan had spent Saturday evening at home, holding a quiet dinner party with his son George, 32, his wife and two house guests, and went to bed about 11.

Friends said his health had never appeared better. Recently he had taken up swimming in addition to his long-standing sport as a yachtsman.

Chain Reaction

Both factors—more exports to America and less imports from America—should help England balance her dollar accounts, which are lopsided in America's favor and are cutting into Britain's reserve of dollars and gold at a fearful rate.

American officials and some diplomatic ones made these observations, applying especially to Britain but also to the other devaluing countries:

1. Imported British goods won't drop 30 1/2 percent for Americans at retail. Motor cars may drop sharply in price, as Sir Stafford suggests. But tariffs, sales costs, importers' mark-ups and other cost factors on this side won't be touched.

British textiles, chinaware and cutlery will come down, it is predicted. But Scotch whiskey may or may not follow suit. The U. S. is the great consumer and the price of Scotch is geared to what the U. S. will pay.

2. The price of British imports will rise; every pound will buy fewer American dollars with fewer American dollars. Sir Stafford told the English yesterday the net increase will be slight. But the monetary fund has warned him and other European finance ministers to keep an anti-inflationary fire hose handy.

The British devaluation is regarded here as temporary relief which must be backed up by these measures:

First, the 10-point program of tariff revision, liberalized Marshall plan aid, colonial development and other steps agreed at the American-British-Canadian crisis talks which ended a week ago.
Second, an aggressive drive to modernize British factories, cut production costs, boost trade within Europe, and break into the American market on a large scale.

Motorcyclist Improving — John Frederick Wolf, 26, of 1351 McCoy is reported as showing definite improvement at the Salem Memorial hospital where he was taken Saturday afternoon in a motorcycle-auto collision at the junction of the 12th street cut-off and 99-E. Wolf received compound fractures of both arms and one leg.

Steel Strike

"We are one day nearer a settlement," he added cheerfully. "Ching made it plain that he regarded the first meeting as more or less exploratory and that he was not discouraged by his initial failure."

The presidential fact-finding board recommended September 10 against giving the steelworkers a fourth-round wage increase, but it proposed insurance and pension benefits that would cost the steel companies 10 cents an hour for each employee.

Murray, who heads the CIO Steelworkers, made it plain that he was not demanding an immediate grant of the welfare recommendations as the price of peace in the industry.
